Fat-times forest firms, sad-times shipyards to get $305 million injection

OTTAWA (UPC) — The federal government will pump $305 million into the forest and shipbuilding industries during the next five to seven years, Robert Andras, president of the cabinet's economic development board, said Thursday.

Approximately $235 million in federal-provincial cost-shared incentive grants will be given to modernize pulp and paper mills in five provinces, including British Columbia.

The federal government will extend a 20 per cent subsidy to the shipping industry to the end of the year. There were plans to cut the subsidy back to 10 per cent.

● IWA eyes larger share of rosy timber profits. Page 10

Industry Trade and Commerce Minister Jack Horner told reporters the government will be injecting $70 million into the industry. The grants include already announced renovations to the expansion of drydocks in Vancouver, Saint John, N. B. and St. John's, Nfld.

Prince Edward Island will get a new ferry, seven search and rescue vessels for the Canadian Coast Guard are being tendered immediately. Plans also include an icebreaker, a fisheries patrol vessel and the refit of the supply vessel HMCS Preserver.

Horner said the construction will create 2,525 jobs and a greater emphasis on repairs.

In the House of Commons, New Democratic leader Ed Broadbent criticized the government for giving handouts to the pulp and paper industry which has had profit increases of 150 per cent, price increases of 40 per cent last year and an anticipated 20-per cent hike this year.

"Shouldn't the companies be plowing a certain percentage of their profits back into modernization?" demanded Broadbent.

Andras said the companies will be spending "literally billions of dollars" in the next few years on modernization and matching every government dollar with three dollars.

"The pulp and paper industry has enjoyed good cash flows in the last few years, thanks to the level of the Canadian dollar but this will not last forever," Andras told reporters.

"Many mills would be pushed into bankruptcy if they were forced to modernize and install pollution controls on their own.

"This industry is too significant to lose. We have to protect jobs if we can and create new ones," he said.

Andras said the government may well be rewarding companies who have not bothered to put their profits into replacing machinery and installing pollution equipment.

Quebec will get $90 million, Ontario $46 million and B.C. will get $40 million in federal grants to update obsolete mills.

Andras said the board will be looking at other industries and making similar announcements shortly.

ALBERTA TAPS SURPLUS TO ERASE CIVIC DEBTS

EDMONTON (CP) — Years of pressure paid off for Alberta municipalities Thursday with the announcement by Premier Peter Lougheed that $1 billion in provincial surplus will be used to virtually wipe out local government debt loads.

The move could reduce property taxes by 10 to 20 per cent—as much as $100 a year for some taxpayers

While civic officials across the province welcomed the move, opposition leaders said the announcement was a pre-election bribe and had been stolen from their policy proposals.

"It's fantastic, a great move," said Edmonton Mayor Cec Purves.

The money will be distributed to all rural and urban municipalities on a $500-a-resident basis to pay off debts that cost more than eight per cent in interest—about 90 per cent of all municipal debts.

● Wolfe promises money to fill welfare increase gap. Page 47

Edmonton and Calgary each will get about $250 million. Other centres with smaller debt loads will have their debts erased entirely with money left over—in some cases millions of dollars—for other projects.

The money comes from Alberta's general revenue surplus of almost $2.5 billion, not from the $4.5-billion Heritage Savings Trust Fund, Lougheed said.

The Conservative premier added that timing of the announcement was affected by public sentiment against growing government and the sudden accumulation of unexpected oil and gas revenue.

Leftist blasts kill 20

Colonist wire services

SAN SALVADOR — Leftist guerrillas set off bombs at the central police headquarters and two police stations in El Salvador on Thursday, killing at least 20 people and injuring dozens, officials said.

They said the worst explosion occurred at the San Salvador headquarters of the national guard, this Central American country's police force.

Meanwhile, five military personnel and two civilians were killed by a third blast at the national guard headquarters in San Miguel, 120 kilometres southeast of San Salvador.

A leftist guerrilla group called the Army of the People claimed responsibility for the bombings in leaflets sent to radio and television stations. It said the bomb attacks were reprisals for the killings Jan 20 of a priest and four other persons by soldiers.

Quebecers boo Schreyer

QUEBEC (CP) — Governor General Edward Schreyer was booed Thursday when he spoke English as well as French during the opening ceremonies of the 25th Quebec winter carnival.

When he switched to English to welcome "my fellow Canadians and Americans," the crowd reacted with boos and shouts of "go home."

Markers spell relief for searching pooches

As any four-legged creature knows, winter spells dog days for the family pet. But municipal officials in Ancaster, Ont., have come to the rescue. Tall markers painted flourescent orange have been attached to all fire hydrants so that they can be located in deep-snow emergencies — fire and canine.

Informer profited millions on drugs

VANCOUVER (CP) — An informant paid by the RCMP to gather evidence against three suspected drug traffickers made more than $2 million dollars by selling drugs while working for the police, a Vancouver lawyer said Thursday.

Sidney Simons, whose bid to speak on police information-gathering techniques was rejected by the McDonald commission, told reporters the informant made some of that money by selling most of a pound of the restricted drug MDA bought for $8,500 with police funds and approval.

Simons said the man testified last November in Nanaimo, at the trial of Raymond Ridge, 31, of Ladysmith, who was convicted of conspiring to traffic in MDA and sentenced to three years in prison.

Simons said the case is only one of many that show the immorality and illegality of police techniques. His bid to speak to the commission, headed by Mr. Justice David McDonald, was denied because he had not submitted a brief a month before the hearing as required.

Committed 40 offences

Simons said the informant, while gathering evidence, committed "about 40 offences to which police personnel are party, directly by participating or by aiding, abetting, encouraging."

Simons said the testimony given at the trial showed that while working for the RCMP between May, 1976, and August, 1977, the informant imported two tons of marijuana and several pounds of cocaine, trafficked in speed and imported two handguns for his personal use.

His first half-pound purchase of MDA was kept by police as an exhibit, said Simons, but a later one-pound purchase, paid for by the RCMP, was given back, after samples were taken, to the informant who sold it.

Bought more with profits

Testimony at the trial, Simons said, showed that the informant then used the proceeds from the sales to buy two more pounds of MDA, both of which he sold after police had taken samples.

The informant's contact during the operation was RCMP Cpl. Chester Cary of the Victoria drug unit, who testified at the Nanaimo trial that he was aware of the the man's activity.

Staff-Sgt. Hawkes of the Victoria drug unit said the RCMP has helped relocate the man as they do all informants whose lives might be in danger after testimony. That help included a $600-a-month living allowance that was paid from September, 1977, just after the arrests were made, at least until the trial, he said.

RCMP Supt. Scotty Gardiner, in charge of criminal investigations in Victoria, refused to comment on the case, saying that it is before the courts.

Simons, however, said the case will not be heard in appeal court until this spring. The appeal will be based on the argument that the county court judge's instructions to the jury were incomplete.

Ridge was charged along with Arthur Williams of Ladysmith, who died in a plane crash before the trial. A third man wanted in connection with the case has not been found, police said.

Simons said the police seem to be going to ridiculous lengths to gain convictions, committing crimes worse than the persons they apprehended. He said it took about a year for the police informant to gather the necessary evidence against his client.

Bouey called to explain dollar dive

OTTAWA (CP) — Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, has been called to appear before a committee of MPs to help explain why the dollar continues to plummet on international markets.

In response to demands from Conservatives Thursday, the Commons finance committee took the unusual step of setting aside their ordinary business and calling a special three-hour meeting to question the central bank governor.

The meeting is tentatively scheduled for Tuesday.

The emergency meeting on the dollar goes only part way to satisfy Conservative demands that officials of the Bank of Canada, chartered banks and investment houses be called before Parliament to explain the dollar's recent troubles.

Conservative MPs greeted news of Bouey's scheduled appearance before the committee as a victory in their efforts to investigate government economic policy. The central bank governor, the chief architect of Canada's monetary policy, is a public servant who by tradition speaks through the minister of finance.

The announcement of Bouey's scheduled appearance came after a raucous debate in the Commons over the weak dollar and government economic policy.

In the course of the debate Prime Minister Trudeau stuck out his tongue at the Opposition. Conservative MP John Crosbie told Trudeau he had a forked tongue and the prime minister suggested to Joe

And down again

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar bounced up and down on New York money markets Thursday before closing at 83.35 U.S. cents, 3-100 of a cent below the 46-year low it reached Wednesday.

Early in the day, the dollar dipped to 83.21 U.S. cents. It later rallied to 83.48 before dropping again.

The federal government is due to release foreign reserve figures for the month of January today, and traders expect they will show Canada's reserves of foreign currency dropped as Ottawa bought Canadian dollars in an effort to soften the currency's fall.

If the reserves are down by an appreciable amount, the traders expect a new round of selling and renewed downward pressure on the beleaguered Canadian currency.

Meeting notice too short—Fed

Premier Bennett says his cabinet has been snubbed by labor.

Labor says the premier is playing political games.

The barbs were exchanged at a distance Thursday when Bennett called a news conference to complain that the B.C. Federation of Labor had declined an invitation to appear before cabinet and present a brief.

The federation says it wasn't even supposed to be there Thursday. And it adds that a senior government official confirmed that its visit wasn't included on the cabinet's morning agenda.

Bennett made no mention of the B.C. Chamber of Commerce, which declined an invitation to present itself at the morning meeting.

The chamber apparently had the same reason as labor for not being on hand: too little time to prepare.

Bennett said at his hastily-called news conference that he thought labor would have welcomed a chance for a meeting since it seemed to have so many concerns and so much to say. He referred to the forecast of a "blood bath" that was allegedly made by federation president Jim Kinnaird at a recent rally.

He also pointed out that neither he nor Labor Minister Allan Williams had been invited to address the federation convention.

A federation spokesman said a senior official of the provincial secretary's office left a phone message Jan. 22 and called back two days later to say a meeting had been set for 11.45 a.m. Feb. 1.

"We told him we just couldn't do the necessary research, call our officers together and prepare our material in such a short time," the spokesman said. "He (the government official) said that was fine, they would schedule us for later in the year."

That, he said, was the last the federation heard of the matter until Bennett complained Thursday.

"As soon as we heard what happened we called the official and asked just what was going on. He said we weren't even scheduled on the agenda this morning."

Mother's suitcase hid dread secret of mummified son

LAWRENCE, Mass. (AP) — For more than 10 years, Shirley White carried her awful secret with her.

Five times since 1968, the 51-year-old day-care worker moved to different residences in Lawrence, welfare department records showed, and each time she carried a leather suitcase which she never opened and always hid away.

When police opened the bag Wednesday, they found the mummified body of an infant boy. Wrapped around the body was a pink blanket and newspapers dated May 27, 1968.

The baby apparently was White's son.

"She told us she delivered the baby herself," said Capt. Joseph Fitzpatrick, chief of detectives in Lawrence.

White, the unmarried mother of a boy, 16, and a girl, 11, was arrested and freed on $10,000 bail without surety for a probable cause hearing Feb. 26 in Lawrence district court.

She is charged with murder and with concealment of the infant's body.

Her son, Michael, called the police Wednesday after he discovered the body.

Five hours later, his mother was under arrest.

Police said White first claimed the child was stillborn.

Morris Ravich, White's court-appointed lawyer, said: "I heard from the police that she said she heard the baby cry at birth."

Detective William Pedrick said a state pathologist, Dr. George Katsas, ruled after an examination that the cause of death was "due to unattended birth," but he did not determine specifically whether the full-term child was dead or alive at birth.

"But we have established through our investigation that the baby was alive," said Pedrick.

Get rid of the Mounties—law union

VANCOUVER (CP) — The RCMP should be dissolved and its police functions assumed by provincial forces, a spokesman for the Law Union of British Columbia told a royal commission into RCMP affairs Thursday.

Craig Paterson said those who believe in the RCMP's continued existence should be responsible for proving the force is necessary.

"Our view is get rid of the Mounties completely," he said. "Throw the red uniforms and the plastic Mountie dolls in the garbage bin forever.

"You can't clean up a paramilitary organization with a few acts of Parliament."

He said provincial forces would provide more effective policing and would be easier to control.

As they entered the courthouse for the hearing, the three commissioners, headed by Mr. Justice David McDonald, passed a Marxist-Leninist group which was protesting the "MacDonald Commission." The chairman's only comment was that his name was misspelled.

In a sometimes acrimonious debate with the three commissioners, Paterson elaborated on the brief of the left-leaning union, an activist group of lawyers, law students and legal workers.

Paterson asked the commission to support the union's contention that the RCMP's main thrust was against "domestic individuals and groups that have ideas and engage in actions that are opposed to capitalism and imperialism." Mr. Justice McDonald said the commission would make known its opinions in its final report.

In its brief, the law union demanded answers to questions that it says the commission has left hanging since an earlier presentation last January. Mr. Justice McDonald said some of the information could not be made public because of the Official Secrets Act.

"The hell with the Official Secrets Act," said Paterson.

"That's fine for you to say," replied the commission chairman.

"It's time someone said it," Paterson parried.

Mr. Justice McDonald said the commission would examine the Official Secrets Act in the course of its investigations, but would respect it as long as it was law.

He also denied law union allegations that there was a dispute between the provincial attorney-general's office and the commission about who was to investigate RCMP security activities in B.C.

The law union representatives said the commission's approach had discouraged the public from coming forward with briefs and that its refusal to release information had frustrated the efforts of other contributors.

Given that approach, said Paterson, "we cannot have confidence that this commission will get to the bottom of this and let the Canadian public know what it finds."

Paterson called a 1969 report on the RCMP by businessman Maxwell MacKenzie a whitewash and said its contention that the greatest threat to Canada's national security was a Communist threat directed from abroad was "utter hogwash."

What was to have been a two-day hearing ended after 1½ days as the commission spent only the morning with the law union representatives and had no other submissions to discuss. Briefs from the B.C. Civil Liberties Association and federal NDP candidate James Manly were discussed Wednesday.

FBI arrest workman in uranium extortion

WILMINGTON, N.C. (UPI) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation Thursday arrested a worker for demanding $100,000 for 150 pounds of low-grade uranium missing from a General Electric nuclear fuel fabrication plant.

David Dale, 39, a temporary employee of a subcontractor at the plant, was being held on a $150,000 bond on extortion charges.

The FBI said the missing uranium is in the form of a brown-black powder kept in unmarked metal pails.

An FBI spokesman stressed the uranium was low grade and was not the type that could be made into a weapon. "Absolutely no way anyone could make a bomb," he said.

The FBI said the uranium is believed to be hidden somewhere in the plant, and is limiting its search to that area.

Joseph M. Hendrie, chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said the material was "not too particularly dangerous but I wouldn't want to go out and roll in it."

Hendrie said the material could cause physical harm if the dust were inhaled for 10 minutes or ingested in a sizable quantity with food.

The FBI said Dale was arrested at the plant. Dale lived in a residential area of Wilmington and a neighbor, who said she saw him "going and coming," said he was quiet and kept to himself.

FBI Director William Webster said a letter found in front of the plant manager's door Monday demanded $100,000 in small bills be paid for the radioactive material by Thursday. He said a sample of the material was left at the office door of the plant manager, Randall J. Alkema.

No money was paid, Webster said.

Hugh Hexamer, a California-based spokesman for General Electric Co., said the plant—called the Wilmington Manufacturing Department, Nuclear Energy Products Division—takes enriched uranium, which comes in a powder form, and converts it to fuel pellets, each about the size of a thimble.

The pellets are then put in fuel rods and the rods are bundled together for use in nuclear reactors.

Dr. Tom Elleman, head of the Nuclear Engineering Department at North Carolina State University, said uranium used in fuel reactors is enriched only four to six per cent while uranium used in nuclear weapons must be upgraded to about 25 per cent.

Elleman said anyone taking the material would be strictly limited on ways to use it.

"He wouldn't really have much leverage," Elleman said. "It is really no use to anyone, although you wouldn't want it dispersed in water systems."

Dollar quiz

Clark he take his foot out of his mouth.

Nevertheless the Conservatives asked some penetrating questions about the economy.

Toronto professor James Gillies criticized the monetary policy of the Bank of Canada. Sinclair Stevens, party finance critic, objected to the way serious economic matters are handled within the parliamentary committee system. Crosbie, party trade critic, questioned the government's basic philosophy that a devalued dollar is good for trade.

The government appeared to take the whole debate less than seriously.

Trudeau dismissed opposition demands as the histrionics of government critics who are more interested in making a splash in the Commons than seriously and rationally debating economic issues in what he called "the way Parliament has always done it."

Chretien continued to insist many sectors of the economy are strong and the most important thing is for the government to maintain a consistent economic policy.

Gillies said there was little to be gained by consistency if a policy was not working. He advocated that the government instruct the Bank of Canada to adopt two new strategies.

He said the Bank of Canada should revalue the gold in its reserves to reflect current market values. This would automatically cause the value of every ounce of gold held by the bank to skyrocket from $42 to $230. Gillies said the result would be to increase the country's foreign currency on reserve by about $3 billion. There are now about $5 billion in the foreign reserve account.

His second suggestion was that the Bank of Canada require the chartered banks to increase the amount of money they are required to set aside secondary reserves.

Gillies said this would tighten up the country's financial markets by getting some of the free cash out of circulation. Speculators would have less latitude to influence the value of the dollar, he said, if there were fewer dollars for them to get their hands on.

Chretien rejected both suggestions summarily, saying the government's monetary policy is well-known, working as it should and needs no changes.

Clark accused Trudeau of trying to muzzle MPs who are seeking an explanation for the nine-per-cent drop in the value of Canada's currency since this time last year.

Trudeau denied the government prevented anyone —politican or public servant—from speaking out on the dollar and said he doubted the sincerity of Clark's demand for a full investigation of economic policy before a parliamentary committee. He said Clark would not be able to come up with intelligent questions to ask.

Trudeau then added: "He (Clark) talks of being muzzled. What we have is a leader who has his tongue in his cheek and his foot in his mouth."

Chretien refused to budge from his customary optimism as the dollar continued to drop in value and the Conservatives intensified their onslaught.

He predicted the country's 1979 trade surplus would be the best ever, exceeding this year's $3.5 billion excess of money coming in from exports over money leaving the country to buy imported goods.

He said businessmen were optimistic, many industries were operating at full capacity and "we're on the right track."

other rally, Kinnaird said there had never been a formal invitation and that the date mentioned by phone was obviously out of the question.

He said it was interesting that on the same day—Jan. 22—the federation invited Bennett to appear at a labor rally later this month, and that this invitation appeared to have been declined.

Meanwhile, the federation spokesman in Vancouver said there will have to be some changes made if the premier really wants the chance to address a federation convention.

"As soon as Bennett starts calling us before passing anti-labor legislation we'll consider inviting him to our conventions," he said.

"As for our meeting in Victoria, all the premier has to do is write us a letter inviting us to appear before cabinet and give us enough time to prepare something worthwhile, so we're not wasting everybody's time, and we'll be there."

Homemade bread for art's sake only

Construction delays at new $30-million federal building in Calgary have turned artist David Gilhooly's basement into bread shed. He created 432 ceramic loaves as decoration for interior wall, but will have to sit on loaves until March.

'Hand it over'—Khomeini

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, in his first hours home from 15 years exile, told 500,000 screaming followers Thursday he would arrest Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar's government and "shut their mouths" unless they handed over power.

Khomeini said the United States had tricked Iran and vowed to kick the "foreign devils" out. Western diplomats said the ayatollah's return pushed Iran one step closer to a long-threatened civil war.

The 78-year-old, white-bearded Moslem leader appealed to the army to "come to the people" by joining his campaign to overthrow Bakhtiar's government and establish an Islamic Republic.

In an emotional climax to a frenzied homecoming welcome by two million supporters, Khomeini prayed among the graves of 1,500 followers who were killed in the 14 months of rebellion that forced the shah of Iran to flee the country.

The ayatollah's homecoming, after numerous delays, was tumultuous but meticulously planned and free of major incidents although there had been fears of an assassination attempt.

Meanwhile, Bakhtiar stayed at his home during the welcoming ceremonies.

It's vandalism —Callaghan

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister James Callaghan said Thursday that wildcat strikes by public service workers amount to "free collective vandalism," and demanded that unions curb their pay demands.

As he spoke to the House of Commons, Britons battled the crippling effects of wildcat strikes by 1.5 million public service workers that have delayed burials, shut schools and hospitals and halted other essential services throughout the country since Jan. 22.

Callaghan's minority Labor government is attempting to hold pay increases to five per cent to curb inflation. But truckers and their employers have agreed on a pay increase of 20 per cent and the low-paid public service workers want more than 40 per cent.

Pickets turned away trucks carrying food and drugs to Central Middlesex Hospital in west London Thursday, and hospital administrator Ray Hummerston said two wards had to be closed.

A question of attitude

MANY CANADIANS appeared before the Task Force on Canadian Unity to argue persuasively that public attitudes are at the root of any national crisis. If we could only develop attitudes to make our present institutions work, there would be no need to reform our constitution, they claimed.

In its lucid report A Future Together, the task force acknowledges this point but has some interesting things to say about public attitudes it found.

First we should note that a Gallup poll last fall revealed only seven per cent of people questioned in Ontario and the prairie provinces believe national unity will be a major issue in the federal election this year. By contrast, the eight commissioners of the task force who talked and listened to Canadians coast to coast got a sharply different view:

"It is our conviction that Canadians are in the midst of a crisis which requires a rapid and determined response," they wrote.

Was the task force simply overwhelmed by all the doomsayers who showed up to mope out loud at its hearings? It doesn't sound that way in the report.

"The task force was created to examine and report upon problems relating to disunity in Canada," the commissioners wrote, "and people were invited to attend the hearings to speak their minds on this subject. It is therefore not surprising that we heard more about what is wrong with this country than about what is right . . .

"These citizens bore witness with their attitudes and very identity to the diversity of which so much has been made in Canada.

"However, one feature of this diversity causes us concern, for its is a diversity in ignorance of itself, where each fragment of opinion is inclined to think that it is the whole . . ."

The hearings revealed there is plenty of good will, generosity and common sense in the country. The task force also found there were instances of suspicion, occasional hostility, envy, intolerance and parochialism.

"Much of it seemed to be based on ignorance and an instinctive mistrust and fear of those who are different: those who look and dress differently, who speak a different language, who practise a different religion or enjoy unfamiliar customs, who came from somewhere else . . ."

In a word, there is bigotry bred of ignorance abroad in the land. (Not us of course, those others — the different ones).

"Not only must we learn to accept the fact of diversity, but we must discover how to cherish and embrace it," the report says.

Amen.

The centre plan

THE IDEA of a convention centre in Victoria has drifted in and out of the news in recent years. People not in the tourist trade may simply shrug when they see it back again.

They shouldn't. The well-being of this community and all of us who live here is involved to some extent in the centre proposal.

At the moment city council has voted unanimously for a plan which would see Victoria ratepayers subsidize the centre by up to $200,000 a year, provided the provincial government will cover the other half of the estimated operating loss.

What will those of us not in the tourist trade get, besides more traffic to frustrate us when we go downtown?

Research indicates the proposed convention centre would attract about $6 million in business a year to Greater Victoria. Butcher, baker or candlestick maker, some of those dollars would filter down to each of us.

Underwriting the operating loss is simply a good investment.

Every community has to generate jobs to survive, much less prosper. Victoria doesn't have much industry, much manufacturing. We do have a setting which appeals to visitors. A convention centre would employ that asset to benefit all of us. But the centre's deficit should more fairly be shared by all regional taxpayers.

Fine hand of the Kremlin seen at work in Iran

OTTAWA — Amazing how the whole scene can change during a brief holiday.

In the Far East the North Vietnamese, who not long ago were idolized by the international lib-left fraternity for "national liberation struggle against imperialism" have completed their conquest of the whole of Indochina. Since the Hanoi regime is beholden to Moscow, it means that the Kremlin has now the strategic use and control of Southeast Asia. At the same time the Carter administration has further weakened the U.S. position in the Far East by abandoning Taiwan.

Yes, perfidy tends to be suicidal.

In the Middle East, where the Arab-Israel feud keeps sputtering despite everybody's professed peace efforts, oil-rich and militarily strong Iran is now tearing itself to pieces with internal politico-religious convulsions. The upheaval, which could cause enormous shifts in the entire power structure around the globe, no doubt has serious internal causes (including, perhaps a too rapid pace of pushing an archaic society into the 20th century by an autocratic monarch). But some explosive additives must have been mixed in by social demolition experts. For if police brutality and corruption were the sole cause of the events which have led to the ouster of the Shah, then upheaval of the same sort would have swept away long ago the much more repressive and corrupt Bolshevik tyranny in the neighboring U.S.S.R.

The fact that in Russia every brave individual who dares to protest repression and corruption is immediately silenced while in Iran "radicals" lead mass demonstrations, indicates not only how vastly different the governments in the two countries are, but also that Communists never fail to aggravate and exploit other people's problems to advance their objectives.

Unfortunately, a stereotype image of "Godless Marxism" that still holds sway of the popular mind in the Western world, tends to make it look incredible that Communists would be involved in what seems to boil down to a mixture of religious fanaticism and opposition to progress. Would the Communists ally themselves with clearly reactionary forces?

Such naive views make understanding of much of what is happening around the world today well nigh impossible. The fact is that Marxists everywhere follow Lenin's instruction to utilize any and every fissure in society for destroying the existing order. Religious and nationalist disputes (not to mention racial prejudices) offer particularly excellent opportunities for disruption from within, because they fuel explosive passions.

As in Ireland, where the Comrades (who now include terrorists instructors even from North Korea) don't give a hoot about the Catholic-Protestant clash which keeps the pot boiling, so in Iran the Kremlin couldn't care less whether the monarchy, which stood in its way, will be replaced by an "Islamic republic" of Ayatollah Khomeini or some dictatorship far more repressive than the Shah's rule ever was. What matters is that the new regime be anti-Western (particularly anti-American) and that it be able to be manipulated from Moscow. How this is achieved is irrelevant, for once the new power structure is in place — be it primarily nationalist, religious or whatever — the organizational skill and discipline of the Communists will get full control of it.

So far this "revolutionary" process has proved unstoppable once it reached the stage Iran is now going through, except in two atypical cases. Both Portugal and Chile, where Communist takeovers were averted (at least temporarily) at the last moment, happened to be too far away for Soviet intervention. Iran, like the already sattelized Afghanistan, sits on Russia' border with little hope of escape from Soviet clutches. Considering the importance of its oil for the Western world (not to mention U.S. monitoring the Soviet military moves), its slide under Kremlin control is a chilling prospect. The rest of the Mideast, what's left of Africa and Western Europe might become untenable in short order if it happens.

Better success next time for Weedless Wednesday?

OTTAWA — During a week when a new governor-general was installed, Parliament met after a four-week recess, and the task force on national unity reported, National Tobacco Education Week didn't make much impact. Even Weedless Wednesday, when smokers were challenged to forego tobacco for one day, passed almost unnoticed.

The department of national health and welfare has been doggedly trying for 10 years to improve our lifestyle by arguing that we should smoke and drink less. When John Munroe was health minister, he prepared legislation to prohibit cigarette advertising. While he lit a cigarette at his press conference, I recall, he explained that tobacco being a product harmful to health, it shouldn't be advertised.

Later he withdrew the legislation. Tobacco might harm a smoker's health, but a prohibition on tobacco advertising could do harm to the health of the media and, possibly, the financial health of tobacco farmers. It became a question of balancing two healths.

The solution was to permit advertising, while warning smokers against tobacco, with health warnings on cigarette packages. That hasn't helped much; people don't scare easily. The efforts of provincial governments to penalize smokers and drinkers by steadily raising the price of tobacco and liquor haven't accomplished much, either.

Now we have National Tobacco Education Week, with a slightly more positive approach. Had the government's left hand known what the right hand was doing, the other events which captured the public's attention would have been scheduled either earlier or later. Given enough impact by tobacco education week, it's quite possible we'd have had cleaner air for at least one day of the year. Perhaps next year, whichever government is in office will remember National Tobacco Education Week, and refrain from doing anything that would distract the public. It shouldn't be difficult.

The health department set up a table on the ground floor of the House of Commons filled with brochures not only on the dangers of smoking — which everyone is aware of by now — but, more important, on how to quit. The Canadian Cancer Society says: cold turkey.

"Simply make up your mind to stop and do it! Tapering off over some weeks works for some people, but we think you're kidding yourself. Why should you be able to stop two weeks from now, if you can't do it now? So if you want to quit, make up your mind that it's going to be you against cigarettes and you're all alone. And if you do make it, are you going to feel good! Mentally and physically."

The cancer society then offers advice which is clearly very sensible, and which I'm sure won't be followed by anyone who tries to quit smoking. During the withdrawal period, "avoid smoking situations such as drinking, playing cards, watching TV or being around other smokers." What does one do with one's spare time? "Repairing something around the house is better than sitting around it. You're busy and you're mind is off cigarettes."

Sensible, but impractical. Too many smokers don't know how to repair anything and have no intention of learning.

Dr. J. Wayne McFarland, an American physician who did a brochure for Narcotics Education Inc., with headquarters in Washington, D.C., goes farther.

After endorsing the cold turkey treatment, he advises: "Drink six to eight glasses of water between meals. Keep a record if necessary. The more liquids you can down, the quicker the nicotine leaches out of your body. Take no alcoholic beverages — no beer, no wine."

Dr. McFarland says the brain is 75 per cent water. I can well believe it. "Water is vital," he says, "not only to help you get rid of nicotine from the system, but also to keep your nerves running smoothly."

He considers the first five days the worst. After that, and especially after the 10th day, you've made it. During the withdrawal period, "omit rare steaks and rich or greasy fried foods from your diet." He thinks these stimulate the desire to smoke. At today's meat prices, it shouldn't be difficult to follow his advice.

Foreign aid tied to trade now in Clark's thinking

OTTAWA — Now that the nattering nabobs of negativism — most of the 12-member press party acconpanying Joe Clark on his recent flight around the world — have done their hatchet job on the Conservative leader, it's past time to look for the positive.

The rajahs of ridicule spent their time poking fun at Clark, and — either because they never bothered or the once-bitten-twice-shy Tory leader kept his distance from them — not much has been said about what has emerged from the trip.

There was more to the global journey than missed plane connections, lost luggage and Joe stumbling into doors, nearly impalling himself on a guard of honor bayonet and making incongruous remarks in all the wrong places.

What was good about the trip — gaffes, goofs and all — is that Clark learned something abroad which, if he wins the next election, will profit Canadians.

And that was the realistic recognition that the taxpayers of Canada are not running an international charity largely for the benefit of the Third World, some of whose members are openly hostile to free western democracies.

For years, fuelled initially by former Prime Minister Pearson, the Liberal government has lavished aid — cash, loans, expertise, food, machinery and material — on the once supposedly colonially-exploited nations of Africa, the Caribbean and the Far East.

It has mounted to well beyond $1 billion, distributed by the Canadian International Development Agency and a half dozen branch-plan operations of the Department of External Affairs.

Sharing the plus-billion-dollar pot of gold has been Cuba, subsidized by the Canadian government while Fidel Castro, as a Communist surrogate, was helping the Soviets take over Africa.

Libya, world sanctuary of terrorists, has been another beneficiary.

Joe Clark has come home with a more practical view of foreign policy — including aid as a tool of providing foreign markets for Canadian business and industry.

That means aid "tied" to trade.

It means profits for Canadian industry and jobs for Canadian workers.

Of course it flies in the face of the "giveaway" philosophy of foreign aid being pushed by Edmonton Conservative MP Douglas Roche who is recognized at least by some Conervatives as the party's "thinker," if not policy-maker on international affairs.

Roche has said he is primarily concerned with humanity in general which seems to give the well-being of Canadians a lesser priority in the conduct of foreign policy.

On his way around the globe, Clark sounded like a modern-day businessman, linking foreign aid directly with Canadian exports, exploring ways of tying it to markets for Canadians suppliers and broadly viewing foreign policy as a means of opening opportunities for industry here at home.

He has put it into quotes:

"I think we have to broaden the understanding of world issues in Canada . . . and so I personally believe that we are most likely to achieve that understanding via a trade route."

One more plus for the Clark journey — small perhaps in terms of money but large in principle — his global mission wasn't on the taxpayers.

Unlike the prime minister, who flies on government aircraft with a small army of aides, Joe Clark flew commercial with only a handful of helpers, none of them on the federal payroll.

A lot of mothers I now are downright meddling when it comes to their children's selection of a boyfriend or a girlfriend.

They want to know how old, how tall, what their father does, where they live, the scope of their education, what their plans are for the future, and how they feel about children.

I don't care about any of those things. All I want to know is, "Is he or she a local call or a toll?"

I don't remember names or faces of old flames. All I remember is their area code. One of my sons once dated an area code 513 for six months. It was marriage by Ma Bell. I figured we were spendng $35 a month to share such insights as:

"What are you doing?"

"Nothing, what are you doing?"

"I don't want to interrupt you if you're doing something."

"I told you I wasn't doing anything."

"You sure?"

"I'm sure."

"So, what's new?"

Another one of my kids showed an interest in a lovely girl who lived just a few miles from us. It was great. I didn't have to worry about a deep involvement because they were never off the phone. He set his alarm to call her in the morning. At night I used to go in and remove the phone from his ear as he slept. It was like hanging up an umbilical cord. As soon as they left one another at school in the afternoon they would shout, "I'll call you when I get home." I offered to feed him intravenously.

The suggestion by my husband to put a timer by the phone with sand running through was ridiculous. However, I did slip a calendar under his door and circle the month.

Panic didn't set in until one day when I was standing near and saw him dial "O".

"Who are you calling?" I asked.

"You know," he said, "The same person I've been talking with for the last month."

"But I thought she was a local call."

"Don't worry," he said. "It only costs about eight cents a minute. Besides, this isn't just some silly kid infatuation. This is a person I genuinely care for and want to spend the rest of my life with. She's important to me. She's special and there isn't anything I wouldn't do for her."

"I'm glad to hear you say that," I said, "because according to the phone bill you owed us $36.86 in long distance charges."

I learned something that day. When toll charges enter the room . . . love goes right out the window.

one man's opinion

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — I am back in this spot today with the express purpose of bringing a ray of sunshine to your drab, mid-winter lives.

Here I am in beautiful Palm Springs—winter watering hole of this great United States—and I am looking out from my motel window, across the swimming pool, to my car in the parking lot which, at this very moment, has an accumulation of at least two inches of extremely wet and ugly snow.

The temperature is 29 degrees Fahrenheit and there's a bit of a snowball fight taking place in front of my disbelieving eyes!

Ah yes, away from the cold and rain of Victoria. Aaaaagh!!!!

Re: Sierra Club defined.

I am writing to correct the misinformation contained in D.E. McMullan's letter Colonist Jan. 16.

Canada has always imported some of her needs from Europe, Asia or the U.S., whether they be people, skills, money, or knowledge. At the end of the 1960s, when it became apparent there was a need for more environmental interest voices, we imported the knowledge and experience that the Sierra Club had accumulated since its founding in 1892. We took these, modified and adapted them to Canadian needs and situations, and in the process evolved a Sierra Club of Western Canada that is independent of its American background in its policy making and actions, while at the same time retaining a link for communication and action on international issues.

Except for a small sum that goes to San Francisco for a magazine and some computer work they do for us, all club dues are retained in Canada for use in this country.

Mr. McMullan has generously left the citizens of B.C. with acres of non-forested land for their recreation—mostly glaciated, or rocky or semi-arrid, and mostly inaccessible. The Sierra Club feels that recreational lands should include the whole spectrum of land types, and be accessible to all—be they seniors, children, handicapped or 'the average Joe'.

In an unforunately arrogant assumption that the only measure of the value of a tree is in board feet, Forrester McMullan ignores the fact that more than 95 per cent of all marketable timber in B.C. is in the hands of the forest industries—hardly a position in which to call anyone else greedy.

The Sierra Club does not promote single use of any resource by anyone. Fish are for commercial and sports fishing, forests for lumbering and recreation, parks for hikers, wildlife and camper owners. Our country is in the guardianship of this generation—it is not owned by us to pollute or consume, we must leave something of merit and value and beauty for the future generations.

A motto used in the club is "Not blind opposition to progress, but opposition to blind progress"—that is the kind of 'progress' that is heedless of the long-term consequences of its actions and cares only about its own gains. We will continue to oppose this kind of action and are confident that this will stand the tests of time.

ICBC's practices of rating drivers grossly unfair

I am writing this letter to complain about ICBC's grossly unfair practices of rating drivers in age groups and by marital status.

I am a 20-year-old single male driver, ah-ha you say, you're a terrible driver, you must pay, pay, pay for your insurance.

WHY! I've been driving for years with only one minor offence, a three-point misdemeanor. Why do I have to pay such outrageous insurance premiums? My driving record is better than a lot of over 25 drivers, and definitely under 25 married drivers. (Getting married improves your driving? Interesting theory!)

Now you are saying, but you get a three-year safe driving discount, don't you? NO! Unfortunately, because I am not a true blue British Columbian and my safe driving has been done in Alberta and Manitoba it means nothing to you.

Why is that if I have a bad driving record out of province they transfer it here and I pay for it, BUT if you have a good record they don't want to hear about it.

Does this not sound unfair and prejudicial against out of province drivers?

I agree 100 per cent with Grace McCarthy, all drivers should be charged the same for car insurance unless they have a bad driving record. In other words we will quote from the law of the nation: "You are innocent until proven guilty!" not visa-versa like it is now.

I recommend the Insurance Corp. of B.C. take a trip to Manitoba where they have cheap, FAIR insurance and they still manage to break even, or close to it.

I urge all readers who agree with me to write your MLA or the minister of transportation and speak your mind. It might help clear up this mess and bring in some fair insurance policies.

Sierra Club crying wolf on Bowron harvesting

I am getting tired of hearing Mr. Nixon and the Sierra Club crying wolf. His charge that the harvesting of 1,500 acres of blowdown in the Bowron Lakes Provincial Park will mean the end of our provincial parks system is, as Mr. Chabot has said, "garbage."

Man has been given the ability to work with and change nature, an ability he often exercises. In the Bowron Lakes we are faced with the decision to let nature take its course or do something about it. The consequence of this decision must be weighed carefully before action (or inaction) is taken. That decision must be made by the professionals of the Parks Branch and the Forest Service who have the knowledge and experience to do so. If they make a poor decision they will be held accountable. However, they must first make that decision and act upon it before they can be criticized for it.

It is irresponsible of Mr. Nixon to say that these professionals, those of the Association of B.C. Professional Foresters and the logging companies are all conspiring to exploit our provincial parks based on this one isolated incident. As a citizen of this province I expect our public servants to manage our resources for the benefit of all. I hope they will continue to be allowed to do so, rationally, using the best information available, something Mr. Nixon obviously does not have or chooses to ignore.

B.C. clobbering not forgotten

Might I point out to Bill Bennett while he's talking about government takeover and government ownership, that it was Mr. Bennett Senior as head of the first Social Credit government in British Columbia that took over the B.C. Electric Company.

It was the biggest and most expensive takeover in the history of British Columbia and the people of this province have been carrying on their backs a tremendous legacy of debt and spiralling costs for energy ever since and will continue to do so for a great many years to come. And now that B.C. Hydro transit system is such a big money loser the present Social Credit government under Mr. Bennett Junior has piled this added burden on the backs of B.C. residents and taxpayers. And this is the man who talks about free enterprise and of a government that doesn't believe in governmental ownership.

The companies taken over by the NDP party were done so chiefly to prevent a loss of jobs and are now doing so well Mr. Bennett is going to give us all five free shares in said companies. We, of course, are not taken in by such grandiose gestures so close to a coming election.

We don't have such short memories that we have forgotten how hard we were clobbered by the present government when they first took office and we are intelligent enough to know that if we are foolish enough to put them back in office they will clobber us twice as hard the second time around.

Regarding Child over pet letter (Jan. 18) I can only assume that the writer L.C.D. wishes to remain anonymous as he/she expects to be criticized for such an unfair attitude.

L.C.D. is quick to champion Gorde Hunter for his scathing remarks re: irresponsible pet owners who allow their dogs to mess on sidewalks, etc.

Of course I agree entirely with Gorde Hunter on this, but to use this article to suggest that pet owners "dispose" of their pets and donate to needy children is equally irresponsible on the part of L.C.D. This "either/or" attitude does nothing to further the cause of children in need, or abandoned animals.

What is needed is legislation for mandatory spaying/neutering of all cats and dogs—the only exception licensed breeders operating within a limited program. This would effectively control the pet population, government funding would assist low-income people, as it does now in the spay/neuter clinics in Vancouver and Ottawa, the roads would keep cleaner, and the needy children?

I don't know—it takes people of compassion to care for needy creatures, young or old; these people are often called "animal-lovers". I'm proud to belong.

If we like, we can buy more of what we already own

Mr. Trew's letter to the Colonist urges me to write a letter in reply.

I think Mr. Trew should have stated that the shares we are about to be given are part of the resource holdings acquired by the NDP and are already owned by the people of B.C. If we like we can also buy more of what we own already. Trouble is there is nothing to stop blocks of shares eventually being bought or rebought by foreigners.

If we had an honest government our BCRIC would have kept right on creating jobs and making us money as intended in the first place.

Mr. Trew's statement about the government helping protect forest management for small logging operators was wrong. The last forest management agreement gave even more to the large companies with control outside of B.C. Read about Rayonier's new holdings in the Queen Charlottes. Take note of the buy-up by the CPR of small operations right around here in the last couple of years.

Mr. Trew says Bennett claims to be keeping resources in B.C. He is the premier who would not agree to, and has not lived up to the federal government's guidelines on sellouts to foreign companies.

The Socreds in their short term have sold off more of B.C. than has happened since the early days of the W.A.C. Bennett Socreds. How about our northern coalfields? Panco Poultry to Cargill and Pacific Stagelines to the Americans? Mortgaging our ferry fleet with Eastern interests? This brings it into the multimillions sold out and makes my point so I will end here.

I'm not signing my name as I have just been taken over and still need a job.

Editorial on war 'criminal' nothing but a nice gesture

Your editorial Keep Him There (Jan. 24) is nothing but a nice gesture! For, in the next moment, you are calling Hess a war "criminal." By what standards, I may ask?

I wish to God that no man on either side in the Second World War committed any crimes worse than those of Hess. The war would have ended happily.

The Nuremberg trials acquitted Hess of all crimes, except the one of planning a war of aggression. In the meantime, all serious English and American historians have agreed, that Poland, England and the U.S.A. were just as guilty of the outbreak of the war (FDR: "Do not yield an inch"), for they prevented a democratic solution of the problem—the "persecuted German minority in Poland."

Hitler's reaction to the flight of Hess to England was: "I guess he has to find himself another job." He did not have to. He has been 37 years in jail.

In 1953 a general amnesty for all real Italian war criminals was proclaimed! (probably without the consultation of Russia.)

UNBIASED HISTORIAN

Savage art sought

Paintings by Anne D. Savage (1896-1971) will be the subject of a travelling exhibition to be preserved later this year under the auspices of the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts' Exhibition Service.

As guest curator, I am searching for paintings suitable for this purpose. Anne Savage painted in the province of Quebec, in Ontario, on the Prairies and in Western Canada. She worked for a time in Minneapolis.

If any of your readers own, or know the whereabouts of paintings by Anne Savage, I would be grateful if they would write to me at 492 Wood Ave., Montreal, Quebec, H3Y 3J2.

Sitting in filth

Re: Memorial Arena.

Very disgusting to pay $4 to sit in filth. When a person has to wash his seat to sit, "very disgusting." Try section 10, Row E and up. I've seen a young fellow with bucket and mop while fans were there trying to clean up. The smell was terrible!

Now, hear this! Listeners have club

Comment in the Jan. 26 issue of the Colonist you mention that Toastmaster clubs and debating societies and other similar organizations do not instruct in listening.

You should then be happy to know that there is a worldwide organization that does instruct in analytical listening as part of its development of the whole person.

International Toastmistress clubs list listening skills among the many areas that must be developed by any person seeking self confidence and leadership in this world. I enclose a brochure which refers to this particular point.

In the city of Victoria there are two clubs and in Sidney there is one, and of course clubs exist in several cities and communities on the Island as well as in 25 different areas of the world.

A member of Toastmistress clubs is generally, but not always a woman. We do have many male members. A member learns through participation to listen, to express thoughts coherently and without bias, and to thereby sharpen conversational skills. A member will also learn to use tact with business associates, to organize self and time and to eventually become a leader in the community.

Any person who wishes information on this inexpensive and pleasant method of educating themselves should call the undersigned for further information on meeting the challenge of today's world.

MAUREEN BUTT,

Victoria.

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market recovered from a 10-point mid-session decline Thursday to record a drop of little more than five points at the close of active trading.

The TSE 300 index was down 5.19 to 1,350.66 in its third consecutive loss.

Analysts said investors were buoyed by a reversal at New York, where the Dow Jones industrial index made its first advance in four sessions.

TransCanada PipeLines Ltd., the session's most active industrial, took first place among the 87 block trades with 92,800 shares at $18¼ a share and another 4,000 shares at the same price.

Carling O'Keefe Ltd. was second with 48,200 shares at $4.70.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Strength in the dollar balanced Wall Street worries about the Iranian situation Thursday as the stock market ended a three-day slump with a mixed performance.

"The bulls would say that's not a bad performance," said an analyst at Bache Halsey Stuart Shields. "The bears would say the jury's still out. You're still unsure about the Iranian situation; there are still some travails ahead."

The dollar did well on foreign exchanges, setting highs for the year against many currencies and surviving even a sell-off by some central banks of the large quantities of dollars they bought last year to shore up the currency.

The dollar's rise offset the return to Iran of Ayatullah Rumollah Khomeini, who returned from exile to enthusiastic rallies. But his presence leaves experts with mixed feelings about Iran's future because of the possibility of civil war and Kohmeini's anti-American stance.

Things looking brighter for B.C. copper mining

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

Things are looking up in the B.C. copper mining industry after years of slowdown, in the opinion of Robert Matthew, managing director of the Mining Association of B.C.

Matthew said in an interview here this week that the current price of about 80 cents a pound was an "encouraging prospect", enough so, he added that some of the companies may be thinking in terms of getting near production decisions.

World copper prices have languished in the 60-cent range for many months.

Matthew went on to say that despite the increase in price, it will have to be close to $1 a pound before mining developments could be assured. The reason for that he said, is that costs associated with a development have risen dramatically in the past two or three years.

The director said that labor and equipment and supply costs have made big leaps, with equipment and supply costs rising at a steeper rate than labor.

"But I guess if you follow the thing through, it's the cost of labor involved in manufacturing the trucks, hoists and other supplies that has made those things that much more expensive," he said.

Market conditions for copper have firmed in Japan and the U.S., both principal markets and London warehouse inventories have declined by about 270,000 metric tons during 1978.

Less cheerful developments, but good for B.C. producers nevertheless, are continuing labor disruption at Inco and Noranda facilities in the east, severe labor problems in Chile and Peru, both major producers and transportation problems that have hindered production in Zambia. Further, Iran, which was scheduled to come into the scene in with a major facility, has had to delay its production because of its political upheaval.

Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission

PUBLIC NOTICE

Ottawa, January 26, 1979

BRITISH COLUMBIA TELEPHONE COMPANY— EMPLOYEE SHARE PURCHASE PLAN

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission has received an application from the British Columbia Telephone Company (B.C. Tel; the Applicant) for approval of the amount, terms and conditions of the issue, sale or other disposition of common shares of its capital stock by way of an Employee Share Purchase Plan (the Plan).

The application indicates that the Plan will provide an opportunity for employees of B.C. Tel and its subsidiaries to purchase B.C. Tel ordinary shares issued from the Treasury. An offering of up to 1,000,000 shares will be made available for purchase under the Plan by payroll deduction, for a period of twenty-four months, divided into two purchase periods. The method for setting the purchase price per share under this offering will be approved by the Applicant's Board of Directors prior to the offering and will be the lesser of (1) 85% of the average market price on the last business day of each purchase period or (2) 85% of the average market price as of the commencement date of the offering which will be set by the Board. As part of the terms of the offering the Applicant may fix a minimum price at which shares will be sold to participants under the offering.

The Plan will provide a means by which B.C. Tel can raise additional equity capital. The proceeds received by B.C. Tel upon the issue of common shares under the Plan will form part of the general funds of the Company and will according to the application be used to pay for part of the Company's expenditures for the acquisition and construction of additions and improvements to its telecommunication system and to provide additional working capital.

Any eligible employee may elect to purchase one share for each full $50 of annual basic rate of pay up to a maximum of 700 shares per employee. Participation in the Plan will be voluntary and participants may elect to cancel their share purchase in whole or in part at any time up to and including the last business day of the Plan.

The full Text of the Plan has been filed with the application. The application and accompanying documents are available for public inspection during normal business hours at the offices of B.C. Tel, 3777 Kingsway, Burnaby, British Columbia; and at the offices of the CRTC, Suite 1130, 701 West Georgia, Vancouver, British Columbia or 5th floor, Central Building, Les Terrasses de la Chaudiere, 1 Promenade du Portage, Hull, Quebec.

Interventions

Any interested person who wishes to comment on this application may do so by mailing or delivering a letter of intervention to the Commission with a copy to B.C. Tel. The mailing addresses to be used are: J.G. Patenaude, Acting Secretary General, CRTC, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0N2; and R.J. Bouwman, Secretary, British Columbia Telephone Company, 3777 Kingsway, Burnaby, British Columbia, V5H 3Z7. In the case of delivery by hand, the locations listed above for public inspection of documents should be used.

A letter of intervention should clearly state the intervener's views regarding the application together with any relevant information which may be useful in explaining or supporting those views. It may also include a request to appear at a public hearing should one be held. In order to be considered, all interventions must be received by B.C. Tel and the Commission on or before February 19, 1979.

Similarly, copies of replies from B.C. Tel to any interventions must be received by the interveners concerned and by the Commission on or before February 23, 1979.

Procedures to be followed

Depending upon the nature of the comments, interventions and replies received within the time periods set out above, the Commission will determine whether or not a public hearing will be held to deal with the application. If, in the Commission's view, a public hearing is not necessary, the Commission will render a decision "in principle" on or before February 27, 1979.

Public Hearing, if necessary

If the Commission determines that a public hearing is necessary, it will take place at a time and location to be specified by the Commission. All persons or associations who will have expressed an interest in this application will be notified by the Commission should a public hearing be convened.

Such a hearing would be held to examine the details of the proposed Plan, with the exception of the exact maximum purchase price, which will be determined in accordance with the method approved by the Applicant's Board of Directors. The CRTC will render a decision in principle forthwith upon completion of the hearing.

If the Commission approves the application in principle, the Applicant will provide the Commission, on or before March 2, 1979 with the exact maximum purchase price with respect to the offering under the Plan. Provided the price, terms and conditions do not depart materially from that set out in the application, final approval will be granted March 2, 1979.

J.G. Patenaude,
Acting Secretary General.

Daimler to enter the wagon stakes

AUTOMOBILE NEWS & VIEWS
By Bill Vance

Strange as it may seem, one of the world's most advanced and sophisticated motor vehicle manufacturers, Daimler-Benz of Germany, has never offered a station wagon. They have built everything else, from world conquering Grand Prix racers to super-luxury sedans and sports cars, and from buses to heavy over-the-road haulers. That's soon to change, however, with the spring introduction of the new 300TD Mercedes-Benz station wagon.

Based on the 300D sedan, the wagon features elegance and luxury in a practical package. It includes such standard equipment as rear washer/wiper and self-levelling. Power comes from M-B's unique 77 horsepower, five-cylinder diesel engine driving through a four-speed automatic which will make it an ecomomical cruiser having a combined Transport Canada fuel consumption rating of 9.5 1/1000 km (48 km/g).

With a weight of 1718 kg (3780 lb.), 114 kg (250 lb.) more than the sedan, performance will be best described as leisurely.

Dieter Scharf, National Sales Manager of Mercedes-Benz of Canada advises that the first TDs are expected to arrive in Canada early in March and that our quota for the year will be about 80.

Price? In the $30,000 neighborhood. If you are in that neighborhood and would like to have the exclusivity of one of the first M-B wagons, better get your order in early.

Impressions—Porsche used to mean a glorified Volkswagen with an air-cooled flat four stuck out behind the rear axle. They gradually changed and became less and less VW and more and more Porsche, but still retained the same basic layout.

Then in the mid-70s, just as Volkswagen made an about-face from the rear-engine, air-cooled Beetle to the front-engine, front-drive, liquid-cooled Rabbit, Porsche too began to change its engine locations with the introduction of the 924. It still kept the rear-wheel drive, however, and mounted the transmission with the rear axle to improve weight distribution.

I recently sampled a 924, a 1979 2+2 coupe with the 5-speed transmission and powered by Porche's willing revver, the 110 horsepower OHC 2-litre four.

The ride was sharp at low speeds, a function of 70 series radial tires and suspension tuned for high-speed travel. But this is a car which really comes into its own way beyond the legal speed limit, and its cornering capabilities are more than most drivers will test.

The extra gear effectively reduces engine speed and noise on the highway from last year's four-speed.

Transmission shifts are smoother once one gets used to the unusual shift pattern. The basic "H" is made up of 2nd through 5th, with 1st to the left of the H and back and reverse to the left and forward. The result is that for the first while one fears that the 1-2 shift will end up in reverse. Fortunately this doesn't happen, because if the lever is just pushed forward it automatically slots into 2nd.

Acceleration from zero to 100 km/h took about 12 seconds, and top speed is in excess of 180 km/h. The Transport Canada fuel consumption combined rating is 10.9 1/100 km (41 km/g). Base price is $22,250.

Oil sands producer accused

FORT McMURRAY, Alta. (CP) — Alberta environment department officials have accused Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. of gross violation of its provincial clean-air licence.

They say sulphur dioxide emissions from the first commercial oil-sands mining plant in Alberta have frequently exceeded the .2 parts per million limit outlined in the licence.

The charge was made during cross-examination of company officials at an energy resources conservation board hearing into a proposed $185-million plant expansion.

Serge Dobko, head of the department's air quality branch, said the company's record should be examined because slight emission increases are expected after expansion.

Solid year

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal Stock Exchange recorded some "encouraging results" during 1978, including a four-fold increase in its financial surplus for the year, Robert Demers, president of the exchange, said Thursday.

In his report to members at the annual meeting, Demers said the exchange recorded a surplus of $125,592 in 1978, compared with $30,088 the previous year.

He added that volume of shares traded rose by 24 per cent last year, while volume of options rose a whopping 294 per cent.

Exchange officials cite need for study

Gold rush news cooled

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Stock Exchange officials moved Thursday to temper rumors of a modern-day gold rush, saying a discovery on the remote Queen Charlotte Islands needs much more work to be proved a mine.

Robert Scott, president of the exchange, told a news conference that it is still uncertain how much gold can be recovered from the publicized deposit held by Consolidated Cinola Mines Ltd., a Vancouver-based firm.

"Caution would have to be the keynote," said Scott, adding that results from the deposit are encouraging but metallurgical, environmental and other studies have yet to be done.

Reflecting the caution, exchange officials decided not to permit resumption of trading in Consolidated Cinola stock until Monday.

Trading in the shares was halted last Monday after weekend reports of a gold rush to the Queen Charlottes and statements from company president Ken Sanders that the find was worth $2 billion.

When trading was stopped, exchange spokesmen explained it was to protect the investing public. Scott said Thursday that investors should not be carried away by enthusiastic talk of a gold rush.

Based on engineering reports and assay results, Scott said, the deposit contains six million tons of gold-bearing rock with an average 0.07 ounces of gold per ton.

He said, however, the figures simply were mineralization that may be present.

"Until detailed metallurgical studies are completed, it is unknown how much of the contained gold can be recovered," a stock exchange statement said.

"The property requires a great deal of additional exploration, metallurgical, environmental and mining studies before the existence of an economic mineral deposit can be determined."

After reports of the discovery, Scott said he had calls from as far away as Europe inquiring about the "gold rush."

Company officials remained firm in their conviction that the deposit will be a mine.

William Thompson, a director of Consolidated Cinola and a past president, argued that the ore should bring returns of $20 a ton with expenses only taking half that amount.

He said public interest had focused on Consolidated Cinola because of the high price of gold, now more than $200 an ounce.

The deposit originally was found by Efram Specogna, a logger and part-time prospector from Nanaimo on Vancouver Island, who immigrated to Canada from Italy.

Low-grade deposits had been known in the area at Juskatla Inlet on Graham Island, largest of the Queen Charlotte chain, for eight years. But Consolidated Cinola discovered higher-grade, gold-bearing rock late last year through a drilling program.

ALBERTA OIL LEASES FETCH $35 MILLION

CALGARY (CP) — The petroleum industry paid $35.2 million this week to the Alberta government to purchase oil and natural gas leases and licences.

About $11.8 million was spent on 100 leases and $23.4 million on 26 licences.

The single outstanding lease purchase was made by Pacific Petroleums Ltd. and Amoco Canada Petroleum Co. Ltd., which contributed equally in the purchase of a 640-acre lease for about $5.2 million. The per-acre price of $8,188 was by far the highest among lease purchases. The lease is 160 kilometres southwest of Edmonton.

The same two companies also paid about $975,000 at $1,523 an acre for another 640-acre lease in the same area.

All other leases were bought for $556 an acre or less.

Among licence sales, Chevron Standard Ltd., paying 75 per cent, and Canadian Superior Oil Ltd., paying 25 per cent, paid the highest price—slightly more than $8 million for a 22,240-acre licence about 65 kilometres northwest of Calgary. The per-acre price was $361.

Older homes selling

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal Real Estate Board says the number of existing housing sold in the Montreal region went up by 21 per cent to 17,885 in 1978 despite a decline in housing starts.

The average price of the one- and two-family units was $45,932, an eight-per-cent increase from a year earlier.

Demand for existing housing is strong because fewer housing starts and rising mortgage interest rates are leading proprietors who wanted to sell to change their mind, the spokesman said.

BUSINESSES AND FARMS — If your business or farm has been in operation for at least a year, the Ministry of Labour will help you pay the wages of up to five young people this summer. We will pay between $1.30 and $2.50 an hour as our share of the cost.

SOCIETIES — You are invited to apply for funding for any worthwhile project that provides an opportunity for young people to learn valuable job skills this summer. Tourism Information Centres that meet the standards established by the Ministry of Tourism and Small Business Development are also invited to apply for funds under this program.

HOW TO APPLY — Applications for funding are available from any Provincial Government Agent, Ministry of Labour Office or one of the B.C. Youth Employment Offices listed below.

Bigger IWA share?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The International Woodworkers of America will push for a larger portion of healthy forest industry profits during contract negotiations this year, the union's western regional president said Wednesday.

Jack Munro made the comment after MacMillian Bloedel Ltd., Canada's largest forest products firm, announced net earnings of $100.9 million, or $4.50 a share for 1978. The amount was up from $60.7 million or $2.70 a share before extraordinary items in 1977.

Sales and other income for 1978 rose to more than $2 billion, an increase of $300 million over 1977.

A company spokesman credited a combination of vigorous markets, a weakened Canadian dollar and increased productivity for the increase.

Munro said that because of the forest industry's healthy profit picture, the union would seek substantial across-the-board increases when its contract expired in June. It would also demand badly-need revisions in job categories.

He blamed the Anti-Inflation Board for large corporate profits in the industry. While it put a ceiling on workers' wages in the last two years, it allowed corporate profits to rise unrestricted.

Editor hearing delayed

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Court of Appeal has postponed indefinitely a hearing into an application by the B.C. Ferry Corp. to have a Powell River newspaper editor fined or jailed for refusing to disclose her sources.

Counsel representing Wendy Fitzgibbons, 31, editor of Powell River News, said the hearing was postponed to allow the government-owned company time to gather more information for its case.

Lawyer Donald Farquhar said the court felt the material supporting the corporation's application was deficient but he could not be more specific. He said the hearing might resume in two or three weeks.

The corporation is asking the court to rule against Fitzgibbons for refusing to disclose the source of a story about a ferry-docking collision about 30 kilometres south of Powell River last September.

The collision was first blamed on mechanical malfunction, but following an internal inquiry into the incident, the corporation fired the master of the Queen of the Islands, Capt. Gerry Stalling.

The B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers' Union appealed the dismissal under the labor code. At an arbitration hearing Jan. 15 in Victoria, Ms. Fitzgibbons refused to identify sources quoted by the newspaper as saying the master was not on the vessel's bridge when it hit the dock.

The arbitration hearing has been adjourned pending a decision on the contempt application.

Frog song 'fun,' but cartoon 'cruel'

SPRUCE GROVE, Alta. (CP) — A song labelling French-Canadians "frogs" was a "fun thing," but a cartoon portraying himself as mindlessly cruel was quite another, says B.C. Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm.

Vander Zalm, in this community 25 kilometres west of Edmonton for a Social Credit dinner Wednesday, said his song implicitly referring to Quebec Premier Rene Levesque as a "frog" was "just political satire."

"CALLING ETHNIC groups names is not defaming them in any way," said Vander Zalm.

"I have friends who are German and I call them krauts; I have friends who are French and I call them frogs."

The minister said he sees no link between his song and a political cartoon which depicted him pulling wings off flies. He recently won $3,500 in damages after suing the Victoria Times and cartoonist Bob Bierman.

THE CAPTIONLESS cartoon depicted him as deliberately cruel, he said, "and of course I'm not."

He said the cartoon was "completely malicious" and the newspaper's attempt to defend it as simple satire was inadequate.

"I WON THE CASE because they hadn't put a caption on the cartoon, and it didn't relate to any issue," he said.

"Other cartoons have been more cruel, but there was an issue involved. This one had no issue. It just depicted me as being cruel."

Sauve says Holt confused about powers of minister

OTTAWA (CP) — Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve has brushed off Liberal MP Simma Holt's demand for the minister's resignation over plans for a CBC television station in Victoria.

Mrs. Sauve said outside the Commons Thursday that Mrs. Holt seems confused about the minister's powers and has misunderstood a Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission decision on cable TV in British Columbia.

Earlier, Mrs. Sauve smiled as Conservative MP Patrick Nowlan rose in the Commons to praise Mrs. Holt, MP for Vancouver-Kingsway, for her criticism of the minister.

Nowlan, MP for Annapolis Valley, suggested Mrs. Holt should be given a communicator-of-the-year award for a West Coast radio broadcast claiming Mme. Sauve "had betrayed the trust of the Canadian people and that she was not competent to run her department."

Nowlan's motion did not get the required unanimous consent.

Mrs. Holt's attack arose from a CRTC decision last week approving a licence for a CBC television station to broadcast on full power in Victoria when it can provide seven hours and 10 minutes of local shows.

"The CRTC determines who is going to have a licence," Mrs. Sauve said. "I'm precluded by law from interfering in these decisions."

Mrs. Holt seems to feel if the CBC is allowed to broadcast out of Victoria some American television stations will be bumped off cable TV locally, the communications minister said.

But the CBC is unlikely to broadcast out of Victoria because budget cuts will probably prevent the network from meeting the CRTC target of seven hours and 10 minutes of local programming, Mrs. Sauve said.

ICBC rounding up debts

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corp. of B.C. said Thursday it had begun collecting about $19 million in debts owed the company since it was established five years ago.

ICBC spokesman Bev Penhall said a list had been compiled of the names of 106,000 people owing money to the corporation and sent to the 800 ICBC insurance agents and motor vehicle branches throughout the province.

When people come in to renew their insurance, agents check for a special code number on the renewal form which indicates they owe money to the corporation.

Penhall said about half of the money owing was the result of people not paying traffic violation penalty point assessments while others used bad cheques to pay premiums.

Penhall said about 20,000 people had cleared up their debts since the program began Jan. 2. Most of the balance was expected to be paid by the Feb. 28 insurance renewal deadline.

Word choice riles Russia

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet Ambassador Anatoli Dobrynin called on U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance Thursday and asked for an explanation of the U.S.-Chinese communique on the visit of Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Dobrynin "raised some questions" particularly concerning the use of the word "hegemony" in the joint press statement issued on Teng's departure from Washington.

The word "hegemony" is the Chinese code word for what they view as Soviet expansionism and aggression.

"He (Dobrynin) had some questions," said Powell with a smile.

Powell said the Dobrynin off-the-record appointment with Vance had been previously scheduled to discuss the strategic arms negotiations, now reaching their final stage.

"He came by to talk about S.A.L.T. and while he was there he brought up the communique," he added. "His primary focus was on the word 'hegemony'."

Powell said Vance had responded to the questions, indicating he had tried to reassure the Soviet diplomat that the United States and China were not aligning against Russia.

Dobrynin's questions were heralded earlier in the day by a blast from Tass, the Soviet news agency, demanding an explanation for the use of the term "hegemony."

The line in the communique that raised Soviet anger said the United States and China "reaffirm that they are opposed to efforts by any country or group of countries to establish hegemony or domination over others ..."

A White House aide said earlier that when it was decided to issue a communique the Chinese insisted on including their favorite word, and the United States added the term "domination," broader in scope so that it could not be viewed as directed solely at the Soviets.

Both Carter and Teng reviewed the statement before it was issued. It was drafted by top advisers on both sides. The United States has concurred in the use of the word in the past—in the Shanghai communique in 1972 at the conclusion of the visit of former president Richard Nixon and when Carter announced the agreement to establish formal diplomatic relations between the United States and China.

Old boyfriend won the bride

LONDON (UPI) — Electrician Bashir Yadalee won an annulment of his marriage by telling a London court his bride of several hours walked out on him at their wedding reception and went off with an old boyfriend.

"And she never even said goodbye," Yadalee lamented outside the court.

Yadalee, 30, and his 19-year-old fiancee, Dorothy, were married at a London registry office in May 1975, he said. She disappeared only hours after the ceremony.

Two weeks after she left him, he received a letter from her saying she had decided to stay with her ex-boyfriend and was sorry for any trouble she'd caused.

"I was deeply shocked and upset by the letter," he said. "With my three brothers I scoured all the parts of London where I thought she might be. We spent a whole year looking for her."

Yadalee was granted an annulment decree on grounds his wife had wilfully refused to consummate the marriage.

Heritage help closer

A variety of compensation options have been recommended by Saanich's Heritage Advisory Committee to provide financial help to owners of designated heritage homes.

The committee will recommend to council's finance committee that the municipality follow Victoria in allowing the owners of designated properties to apply for cash grants equivalent to a percentage of the decrease in their property value.

Philp loses a legacy

A North Saanich alderman was deprived in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday of the major share of a 1974 will said to be worth about $138,000 net.

Mr. Justice J.G. Gould made his ruling following an eight-day hearing into the will of Irene Frances McRae, who died Nov. 10, 1977.

In her last will, she left $10,000 legacies to each of her daughters, Doreen Beverley Williamson of West Vancouver and Sally Laidlaw of Vancouver.

The residue of the estate went to North Saanich Ald. Owen Bartley Philp, 48, subject to a life interest to his 82-year-old father Bartley Somerville Philp, with whom McRae lived between 1970 and 1973 after they had first met at a party in 1967.

But in prior wills, the two daughters were to be the beneficiaries of the entire McRae estate.

Two actions were filed in supreme court. Gould ruled that the last will had been proved and granted probate. But then he redivided the will under an action brought by the daughters under the Testators Family Maintenance Act.

Gould increased the legacies to the daughters to $35,000 each plus interest from Nov. 10, 1977 to the present time. The interest is the average the estate has been earning, about eight to 8½ per cent.

The income on the net amount of the estate that remains after the legacies are paid goes to the elder Philp. The residue on his death will then be divided equally among the daughters instead of the alderman, who was sustained in his capacity as executor.

Gould indicated that his written reasons will be handed down later.

The daughters were represented in court by Hugh Henderson of Victoria and Brian McLoughlin of Vancouver. George Macintosh of Vancouver represented Philp.

LEGISLATION SLAMMED

'Never again' says stymied hospitals union

By DON COLLINS
Colonist reporter

The first union to voluntarily use the binding arbitration machinery of the Essential Services Disputes Act says the experience has been so bitter that it will never make the same mistake again.

"Even though employers are failing to abide by terms of such awards, the main criticism must be reserved for the Social Credit government for inflicting on public sector workers legislation designed to benefit public sector employers—namely the government. It is leading us to a state of industrial relations dictatorship," Jack Gerow, secretary-business manager of the 22,000-member Hospital Employees' Union said Thursday night.

Gerow is before the B.C. Labor Relations Board trying to prove that operators of seven Vancouver area private hospitals are refusing to implement terms of a binding arbitration award brought down Jan. 18 by Victoria lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood. He says he expects the union may soon have to take the same course of action concerning a master agreement with more than 100 major B.C. hospitals.

An independent union, the HEU applied first for an arbitrated settlement with the private hospitals, then with the major hospitals. The major agreement came through first, but only after a long battle that saw both the union and government opposing the industry's efforts to upset the award in court.

Gerow claims the machinery of the legislation is such that employers seem free to take their time abiding by awards. The result is a painfully slow procedure, he says.

The government has taken advantage of this, says Gerow, by setting five per cent increase guidelines on public sector spending. He says it means employers are now able to use this ceiling as an excuse for trying to get around contract obligations.

In the case of the private hospitals, some 500 employees earning what Gerow calls "poverty level" wages —(the basic wage was $4.66 an hour)—were without a contract since July, 1977. Gerow says the employers have refused to implement some of the terms of the award and that this has created bad feelings and a threat of job action.

He says the union has served seven days' notice on the major hospitals' bargaining agent, the Health Labor Relations Association, that it will seek action before the LRB if meetings aren't held to discuss a contract "opener" for 1979. The settlement reached through arbitration provided for a seven per cent hike this year, another one per cent in benefits, and an automatic opener if the rise in the cost of living exceeded seven per cent.

While the HEU is not affiliated with the B.C. Federation of Labor, it is so incensed with the essential services legislation and what it considers unfair treatment of public sector employees, it has decided to support the federation's current protest rallies, Gerow says.

"We've got to change the policies. And if we can't change the policies, we've got to change the politicians."

He accuses Premier Bennett of voicing "political pap" through statements that he wants consultation with the labor movement.

"Last summer when we were having difficulties concerning implementation of an award, I sent a telegram to the premier asking for such consultation. And to this day he hasn't replied."

Pioneer home restoration cost runs up

It may not have been such a good idea after all to "save" Saanich's oldest home.

It was almost a year ago that the Heritage Advisory Committee first embarked on its program to save the residence built in 1859 by mariner Captain Charles Dodds and spend $21,000 on having it restored to its former grandeur, but the committee is still haggling over a future use for the old structure.

The committee was told Thursday that restoration would cost an additional $8,000 and no definite decision had yet been taken on future use of the former stately home.

Some members suggested the original part of the building should serve as an historic artifact and newer portions like the kitchen be used for storage of sports equipment.

However, before any decision is made, it was agreed that municipal staff and a heritage building architect would tour the building and determine the amount of restoration work to be done.

The house was moved from Kenmore to nearby Lambrick Park last April because it stood on the site of a planned six-lot subdivision, and municipal crews have been working on the restoration as a "fill-in" between various construction jobs.

Neil Findlow of the municipal planning department told the committee that 20 of the 27 restoration items had been completed at a cost of $13,500, but additional money would be required if the remaining major items were to be completed.

They include electrical heating, upgrading plumbing, providing water and sewer hookup and drainage facilities.

Committee chairman Douglas Franklin said he was opposed to spending money on water and sewer as he envisaged the house only being open at certain times for tours by groups. The old building, he suggested, could be included in educational field trips arranged by local schools.

Architect Peter Orme suggested the house be rented to a commercial enterprise as a means of recovering some of the tax dollars spent on restoration.

Heritage 'pocket' in sight

The Saanich Heritage Advisory Committee has narrowed to 70 from 150 the number of residential and agricultural buildings proposed for heritage designation.

The list will be presented to the committee next month and later to council, chairman Douglas Franklin said at a meeting Thursday.

The list was pared after "windshield inspections" and more detailed examinations and contact with owners. The committee embarked on its task last April.

Franklin said the single-family houses being considered for designation are scattered throughout the municipality while the farm buildings are concentrated in two or three areas.

In addition to identifying heritage buildings, the committee is also considering designating a series of houses—a pocket neighborhood—on Kisber Avenue, Franklin said.

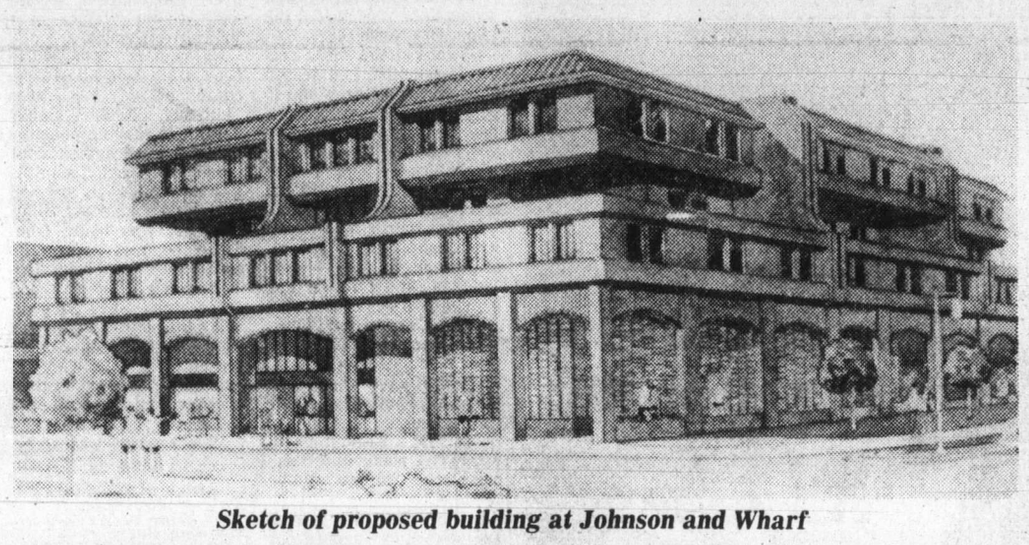
There is also a possibility the committee will make recommendations about establishing a Saanich museum.

All archival material is now stored in a municipal hall vault.

The committee has already presented council with a recommended list of 16 institutional buildings it believes should be designated by bylaw.

Still critical

Three teenagers injured in a Jan. 13 car crash on Claremont Avenue in Saanich were still in critical condition Thursday at Victoria General Hospital. Jack Schwartzenberger and Leith Hulbert were in the hospital's burns unit, and Lawrence Husiman was in intensive care.



Sketch of proposed building at Johnson and Wharf

Salvation Army opens fund drive for centre

The Salvation Army Thursday kicked off its $500,000 fund-raising campaign for the construction of a new $3 million building at Johnson and Wharf.

The complex will accommodate the Harbor Light Centre for the rehabilitation and treatment of alcoholics, the Men's Social Services centre for transients, as well as the Salvation Army's Thrift Store.

At present, the programs are operated out of two separate buildings, both of them old and cramped.

The new complex will have 53,000 square-feet, 450 of which will be used for storage.

The new facilities will have 121 beds, 61 for the Harbor Light Centre and 60 for the Social Services Centre. A chapel will accommodate 150 people.

The sleeping accommodation will consist of 52 single rooms, four four-bed dormitories, three dormitories with eight beds and one with three beds.

There will also be staff and counselling rooms in the new complex.

Salvation Army officials said Thursday that the new building will enable them to expand their programs, paricularly the alcoholic treatment centre.

There was a great need for the treatment of alcoholics, but the present quarters simply didn't permit expansion.

Last year, the Harbor Light Centre admitted 118 alcoholics for treatment and counselling. The new quarters will double that capacity.

The new building will be financed from a number of sources. The provincial government is contributing $1 million, the Salvation Army $1.5 million and the special building fund drive will raise the remaining $500,000.

Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier, chairman of the fund-raising committee, said he was confident that the target would be met.

The committee will approach businesses as well as individuals but won't conduct a door-to-door campaign which because it would interfere with the Salvation Army's regular campaign for operating funds.

Cartoon on you-know-who withheld by newspaper

A spokesman for Victoria Times, which recently lost a libel suit to Municipal Affairs Minister William Vander Zalm, said Thursday the newspaper decided not to publish another cartoon dealing with the controversial minister.

The new effort by cartoonist Bob Bierman, who was named in the libel suit, was drawn after the minister sang a comic song that used "frog" for French-Canadian at a regional convention of the Social Credit party last weekend.

Vander Zalm said the song was all in fun.

He won a libel suit against a Bierman cartoon which showed a gleeful Vander Zalm pulling the wings off a fly. There was no caption.

The newspaper is appealing the decision.

The Times spokesman said the newspaper decided not to run the frog cartoon after its lawyer said it might be considered contempt of court since the appeal is pending.

Water line unplugged

Approval for the Saanich Peninsula water line to cross the federal agricultural research station property, west of the Pat Bay Highway, has been received.

Rerouting the line around the federal property would have cost B.C. taxpayers an additional $70,000.

Transport Minister Otto Lang sent a telex to Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis on Thursday which said:

"I am informed approval was given by department of agriculture officials on Jan. 25 to the Capital Region District for the water main to be constructed across the research station property.

"I will communicate to your colleague Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm my hope that the respective officials will quickly resolve the issues in a matter satisfactory to both users of the system and the capital region district."

Curtis sent Lang a telex last week, outlining the difficulties he has had during the last few weeks in getting cooperation from Lang on the water issue.

Curtis said Lang's staff in Ottawa and Vancouver had been "arrogant and indifferent."

On Thursday Curtis said he was pleased the project could start rolling again, "after a great many weeks of delay."

'Get-rich' ad jangles BBB phones

A full-page "get rich" advertisement in Thursday's Colonist and Times is not all it is cracked up to be, says the Victoria Better Business Bureau.

The ad, entitled "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches," offers information on how to become rich without working hard.

The ad suggests that those answering the ad may become millionaires. It says the information one needs is contained in a book which costs $10.

It will be "the biggest bargain of your life," the ad says.

Better Business Bureau manager Bill Tindall said Thursday in an interview that one can get the same information from "numerous books in the public library."

All you'll get for your $10 is a book on self-improvement, Tindall said.

He said that Joe Karbo, the man who signed the ad, has been in the business since about 1954.

Karbo "operates a variety of mail order companies offering a wide range of goods," Tindall said. "The claims he makes are ambiguous."

Tindall said Karbo has run ads for about 20 years which promise to "let a few friends in" on his secret.

The same type of ad that has run in the two Victoria dailies has also run in magazines like "National Enquirer and Midnight Expose," said Tindall.

Tindall said he did not believe the ad was the same type that offered a get-rich scheme only to send readers a booklet that advised running another ad.

"That routine is usually the 'homework scheme' where you ask for a booklet and it says to boil a bar of soap and make liquid soap," he said.

Tindall said his office has received "lots of inquiries" concerning the ad, as well as a similar ad that ran in both Victoria papers on Jan. 10 and 11.

Industrial site on comeback trail

Saanich is about to enter another round in the saga over industrial development at Royal Oak.

Ald. Sandy Noel said in an interview Thursday that he would revive the controverial issue at Monday night's council meeting.

"I feel it's time council took its head out of the sand and settled this matter," he said.

He made the comments following the release of a report on the recent Saanich industrial referendum by University of Victoria political scientist Dr. Daniel Koenig.

The analysis by Koenig shed no new light on the referendum, according to Noel, "and it's for this reason that I'm going to raise the issue at council."

To the general question whether residents favored establishment of an industrial zone, the vote in November showed 5,792 in favor and 3,221 opposed.

The vote rejecting the Interurban area as a site for industrial development showed 2,988 voting yes and 4,071 opposed. The third question on the ballot showed 4,347 residents supporting the Royal Oak site with 3,496 opposed.

The referendum came after council had narrowly rejected a plan for industrial development on 128 acres at Glanford-Vanalman and had overwhelmingly rejected Mayor Mel Couvelier's plan for a municipal land-banking scheme on 141 acres at Interurban.

Results of the referendum questions indicated that development of an industrial zone was supported in principle, Koenig says.

It also showed Royal Oak was an acceptable site and that Interurban was not acceptable to residents.

The analysis showed 68 per cent of those favoring creation of an industrial zone wanted it at Royal Oak compared with 47 per cent who felt Interurban was the logical site.

The Royal Oak and Interurban sites received more negative than positive votes in both the advance poll and the Glanford poll, Koenig notes in his report.

Noel said he believed it was for the good of the municipality that the controversy over industrial development be settled.

"Some members of council were afraid of the vocal Royal Oak Community Association last time around," he said. "They were outspoken all right, but they only represented about 40 per cent of the area residents."

Noel said he was confident council would vote 5-4 in favor of the Royal Oak site if the question was placed before aldermen in the near future.

"Council has to have enough guts to stand up and be counted; we've been dilly-dallying too long."

Noel said that because of council's inaction the Capital Region Board had been "sitting" on a Saanich request to have the property at Royal Oak rezoned residential.

One member of council not in Noel's corner is Mayor Mel Couvelier.

He intends resurrecting the Interurban scheme and says he will not accept the Royal Oak site without a fight.

He favors the Interurban site because it could be offered for between $2 and $2.25 a square foot compared with $6 a square foot for land at Royal Oak.

Most NHL managers opposed to international games

HAMILTON (CP) — If they had their druthers, the general managers of most National Hockey League clubs would prefer to concentrate on beating each other and let the Russians skate on their own side of the pond.

But while a few owners—notably Harold Ballard of Toronto Maple Leafs—agree, NHL president John Ziegler says international hockey is here to stay.

The Hamilton Spectator polled the GMs of the 17 NHL clubs and found 14 of them opposed to exhibition games against touring European clubs. Six said they could have done without next week's Challenge Cup series in New York between the Soviet national team and the NHL All-Stars.

"We should be concentrating on our own teams and our own league and selling our own sport," said Ted Lindsay of Detroit Red Wings, the most vocal opponent of international play.

"We're closing down our league for the whole week. The players who should be practising aren't going to be practising. They'll all be in Florida. When they come back, we'll be cheating the public because they won't be in shape."

Jim Gregory of Toronto was concerned about the possibility of injuries to his key players in Challenge Cup play.

"What do I do if we lose a player in one of those games?" he asked. "If a player got hurt and missed six or seven weeks, that's the end of the year."

Fred Shero of New York Rangers said he would favor the Challenge Cup if it were held every four years and the team had time to prepare.

"We play so many games now that nobody wants any more exhibition games," he said. "With pre-season, regular season and playoffs, we play about 120 games. They should have just one big one and only make it every four years like the World Cup of soccer and it would become a big spectacle."

Ballard, who has never permitted Toronto to play any of the Russian visitors, leads the opposition among the owners to Soviet-NHL competition.

"They come over here and get a couple of million dollars and then laugh at us," he said. "Not only that, they're going to kick our butts in this series.

"The only owners that are in favor of this are the ones who think they are going to make a buck. There are too many owners in this league who don't have any respect for the game. All they worry about is the dollars."

Lou Nanne of Minnesota North Stars, Cliff Fletcher of Atlanta Flames and Emile Francis of St. Louis Blues are three GMs who like the international games.

Nanne enjoys the calibre of hockey, Fletcher says the experience is valuable for his players and Francis considers the boost from Challenge Cup gate receipts to the players' pension fund a boon for the poorer NHL club which otherwise would have to foot the bill themselves.

Ziegler says NHL owners generally welcome the international competition, although the general managers' opposition is understandable.

"Their job is to put the best hockey club in that particular city," said the NHL president. "The owners, however, have a concept that goes beyond that city toward the betterment of hockey.

"A series like this is a risk but it is going to produce a good dollar and it has already created a lot of excitement. As long as the owners like it, there is going to be international hockey."

Dr. Pashby displays approved protective face masks Thursday in Toronto

Tested face masks recommended for all hockey and lacrosse players

TORONTO (CP) — A new national standard for hockey and lacrosse face masks has been approved by the Standards Council of Canada.

The Council recommends the protection be for all players, regardless of age.

"I believe this is the first time in Canada, and I'm fairly sure in the world, that there has been a national standard that covers every player in both sports," said Dr. Thomas Pashby, a Toronto ophthalmologist and chairman of the Canadian Standards Association's technical committee.

The standard is the product of more than two years of mechanical and optical examinations by experts and observations of players wearing masks in actual games. It recommends facewear that has proved to withstand a multitude of toughness tests.

While a national standard is not enforceable, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and other leagues in Canada have generally followed them.

The masks certified in the standard were tested by pucks affixed to 10-pound weights dropped from 60 feet. They have proved they do not shatter or make contact with dummy heads underneath.

In addition, masked headforms were subjected to weights of 350 pounds to ascertain that they would not shatter or make contact with the dummy heads.

The standard says that no part of the frame of the mask should be closer than half an inch to the player's face.

North Stars whip Wings to maintain hot streak

It took a while but a fusion seems to be working for the Minnesota North Stars.

Owners of the worst record in the NHL last season with only 19 victories and 45 points from their 80 games, the North Stars have suddenly taken off and are now in the thick of a scramble for one of the four wild-card Stanley Cup playoff berths.

Their fourth successive win, stretching their unbeaten streak to nine, came Thursday night when they handed a 6-1 walloping to the out-of-it Detroit Red Wings, last season's most-improved team.

Victory gave the North Stars 47 points from their first 50 games, and moved them, with a game in hand, within five points of the second-place Toronto Maple Leafs.

In other Thursday games, Boston Bruins snapped out of a slump by knocking off Chicago Black Hawks 6-1, and 4-1 victories were registered by New York Islanders over Philadelphia Flyers and Atlanta Flames over Vancouver Canucks.

Newcomers who have been a big help all season, again played key roles Thursday. Rookie Bobby Smith, improving steadily and a prime candidate for the Calder Trophy, shot his 19th and 20th goals and had an assist; goalkeeper Gilles Meloche, who came from Cleveland Barons when the clubs were amalgamated, continued his fine play, and defenceman Gary Sargent, who came from Los Angeles Kings in a trade and is a big reason for a significant reduction in the goals-against average, had a goal and an assist.

Meloche, who was at his best in a 13-for-13 first period which enabled his club to get off to a 1-0 start, had to leave the game for the stitching of a forehead cut but returned.

North Stars stretched out to 4-0 in the second period and completed their scoring before the Wings prevented a shutout.

THings didn't go at all well for ex-Canuck Pat Quinn in his NHL coaching debut. He was at home, but the Islanders came to town motivated by two successive home-ice defeats, and they checked well and made the most of their 18 shots.

It was a 1-1 affair starting the third period, and Clarke Gillies, Mike Bossy and Lorne Henning put it away for the Patrick Division leaders. It extended the Flyers' winless streak to nine games, their longest since the 1970/71 season.

The in-and-out Flames moved seven points ahead of the Flyers and to within a point of third place with their easy win over the injury-decimated Canucks.

Victory was the fourth in a row, and the fifth straight on home ice, for the club which started the season 10-0-2 and has since surged and skidded in alternate shorter streaks.

Jere Gillis got the Canucks away on top with his 10th goal of the season, but the Flames, led by Jean Pronovost, weren't particularly pressed. Pronovost, who got away to a slow start this season but is now going in top form, made it 1-1 with his 20th goal, set up rookie Red Laurence for the winning goal and drew an assist on Ken Houston's clincher.

Goalkeeper Gerry Cheevers was a key player for the Bruins although they allowed the Hawks only 17 shots. Most of them were dangerous, and Cheevers was brilliant in the second period as the Bruins killed off three successive penalties. Peter McNab had a goal and two assists.

Broncos drop Turner

DENVER (AP) — Denver Broncos general manager Fred Gehrke has announced that the National Football League team has not picked up the option on place-kicker Jim Turner, making the 15-year veteran a free agent.

Gehrke said the Broncos didn't make Turner a new contract offer when his previous pact expired. But Gehrke added, "It is hoped that we can get together on a new contract" in the future.

Turner, 37, has scored 1,368 points—the third-highest figure in NFL history.

Thunderbirds top Aussies

Robbie Greig scored two tries Wednesday to lead University of B.C. Thunderbirds to a 21-7 victory over Sydney University of Australia in an exhibition rugby match.

The match, originally scheduled for Vancouver, was moved to Victoria's Macdonald Park because of frozen fields on the mainland.

The Australians had defeated University of Victoria Vikings 37-3 in a match earlier this week.

Panthers, Bays post victories

Mount Douglas Rams, still reeling from three losses at last weekend's Oakleaf Classic, continued to have their troubles Thursday in the Greater Victoria high school basketball league.

Parkland Panthers sprinted to a 34-23 half-time lead and continued to a 65-55 victory over the Rams in one of two boys' games.

In the other, Oak Bay Bays kept their unbeaten string alive with a 67-29 whipping of Reynolds Roadrunners.

Quinn Groenhyde scored 18 points for Parkland, Greg Wiltjer had 17 and Dexter Williams 16 for Panthers while Ian Lang's 12 points topped the Rams.

In girls play, Adrienne Mason scored 17 points as Mount Douglas Ramblers tripped Parkland 55-32. Oak Bay dumped Reynolds 56-37.

Marina Scott scored 16 for Mount Doug while Louise Allen topped all scorers with 20 points.

Tracy Warman scored 22 points for Oak Bay and Karen McComber had the same amount for Reynolds.

Cougars trying new winger

Like most of the rest of the Western Hockey League, Victoria Cougars had the night off Thursday.

Only Saskatoon Blades and Medicine Hat Tigers took the ice in anger, skating to a 3-3 tie in the Alberta city.

Cougars, who play host to Billings Bighorns at Memorial Arena Saturday night, practised as usual Thursday—minus wingers Greg Adams and Bob Jansch.

Adams and Jansch sat out with mild cases of strep throat but should be dressed Saturday.

So will Brad Yachimec, a right winger from Sherwood Park Crusaders of the Alberta Junior Hockey League up for a brief tryout.

Yachimec, brother of Bart Yachimec of Portland Winter Hawks, saw limited action for the injury-torn Cougars in their 3-2 loss to the Bruins in New Westminster on Wednesday.

Four Cougars are currently on the injury list.

Victoria is in third place in the Western Division, three points back of New Westminster and 23 behind first-place Portland.

In Medicine Hat, Rod Van Slyke scored at 5:44 of the third period to lift the Tigers into the tie.

The Blades, who outshot Medicine Hat 37-34, led 3-2 after the second period. The first period ended in a 1-1 tie.

There were 12 minor penalties, seven to Saskatoon.

SASKATOON (3) — Bill MacNaught 2, Blake Stephen; MEDICINE HAT (3) — Rod Van Slyke, Brian Keates, Curt Broadhead. Attendance — 1,680.

Cocaine confirmed in Stabler issue

GULF SHORES, Ala. (AP) — Police chief James Maples said Thursday lab tests have confirmed that cocaine was the susbstance planted on the car of a California sports writer who came here to interview National Football League star Ken Stabler.

Maples said a report from state toxicologist Jim Small of Mobile says an analysis "reveals the presence of cocaine" in the powdery substance found Jan. 22.

He said an investigation is continuing and there have been no arrests.

Maples said the toxicologist's report did include the amount of cocaine found in the substance. But the police chief declined to disclose what the amount was. Earlier police reports said there was "about an ounce" of a powdery substance in the packet found on the car of Sacramento Bee sports writer Bob Padecky.

Police arrested Padecky after finding the substance but a short time later dropped any charges. Maples said it was determined that the cocaine apparently had been planted on Padecky's car in an attempted frame-up.

Stabler, the quarterback for Oakland Raiders, said he knew nothing about the apparent frame-up and that the episode was embarrassing to him. Padecky's arrest occurred as the sports writer left one Gulf Shores lounge to resume the interview with Stabler at another location.

Police said the sports writer's car was stopped and the arrest was made because the police department had received two anonymous telephone tips saying cocaine was on the car.

Riddell leads charge

Chris Riddell scored four goals Thursday night and Ron Poole added three more as Esquimalt Maple Leafs thumped Victoria Athletics 12-6 in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game at Pearkes Arena.

Gerry Blanchette and Bayden Robinson scored twice each for Esquimalt, which led 6-5 after two periods. The teams were tied at four after one.

Steve Kishkan kicked out 26 shots for Esquimalt and Rich Bains made 28 saves for Athletics.

VICTORIA WATERFRONT continues to be Vancouver Island's salmon fishing hot spot with a boat average of 2.6 winter chinooks for 580 boat days recorded in the past week. But some of those winter fish started this week to infiltrate into the Pedder - Becher - Sooke waters, although not in great numbers.

Hootchies and herring strip, fished very deep between the 25 and 35 fathom ledges, are picking up limits of six to nine-pounders and some jacks for anglers trolling between Macaulay Point, through Brotchie Ledge, the Beacon Hill flag pole, to Clover Point. On the average the salmon are a little bigger than they were a couple of weeks ago.

And fishermen who like variety on their table or don't have boats to go after the salmon are managing to pick up four or five rockfish an outing by casting from the Breakwater with small jigs, Sildas, Pirks, Pirkens or other bright lures, especially at night.

The chinooks are starting to show again in Sooke - Becher Bay waters, but they keep shifting spots and it is a matter of finding them. There is a fair abundance of six-inch herring around the Bedfords, which would indicate that is the spot to try a plug, and it is a spot which has produced well for us with six-inch Tomic plugs.

At Pedder Bay there has been a lack of fishermen, but some fair catches have been coming from the waters between the kelp beds, through Whirl Bay to Church Island.

George Moore got a 10-pounder, a nine-pounder and two in the five-pound bracket off Constance Banks on the weekend.

The Flats off Oak Bay and Trial Island waters have been producing a few chinooks and the odd one has been taken by casters from Golf Links Point. Ten Mile Point is still producing limits of 14 to 16-inch grilse for anglers casting from shore.

James Island and Saanichton Spit are still producing a few fish.

Saanich Inlet has been producing 1.1 fish a boat, better than most lower Island areas, except for Victoria waterfront. Among the Inlet fish this week have been a couple of the bigger chinooks, but catch has been mostly jacks and grilse. Indian Bay, Willis Point to McKenzie Bay, and Bamberton have been producing spots. Hall's Boathouse has had some thin ice in spots in the mornings, but there has been no trouble getting out to fish, and some anglers have been getting chinooks by fishing very deep.

★ ★ ★

UP-ISLAND ANGLERS have been getting a few five to eight-pound chinooks off Bold Bluff, north power line in Sansum Narrows and in Chemainus Harbor where both trollers and spin casters off the log booms have been clicking.

One Nanaimo angler on Monday hooked a 14-pounder, plus a killer whale which towed him for some distance.

Nanaimo chinook fishing has been good ... off the outside of Five Fingers, very deep with herring; off Entrance Island reef which runs to the southeast, and where anglers have been able to fish fairly shallow; and at Nanoose, where big schools of herring have been noted and where anglers casting from the navy docks with bobber and herring have been picking up salmon at night.

Northwest Bay has been slow, but in that same area moochers have been taking salmon in Nuttall Bay, close to shore not far out from Clayton's ramp. Trollers have been going to 180 feet to get them off the Cottam Reef spar buoy. There is a big abundance of herring at the 30 ton 40 fathom mark off Nanoose Bay and Mistaken Island, but anglers don't seem to be going after salmon in those area.

In Comox Bay anglers have been getting some four to five-pound jacks trolling with herring or Tom Mack spoons, or drift fishing with Sildas or Buzz Bombs. Between Hornby and Denman Island, off the ferry docks, has been good for trollers.

Campbell River is still producing the exciting winter chinook fishing — 10 to 18-pounders on surface trolled bucktail flies ... off Menzies Bay, Duncan Bay, the Campbell River waterfront, down to Shelter Point and over the Cape Mudge reef. When bucktails haven't been taking them Deep Six with Strip Teaser, or five-inch Tomic plugs have been working.

STEELHEADERS are finding out that because of the persistent long spell of cold weather, what started out to be a fine year of big fish has turned into a rather lean year. But there are some bright spots.

A 29-pounder was reported from the Gold River three weeks ago.

All rivers are low, but the Campbell and Big Qualicum have been producing; the Nanaimo was good until the last freeze-up; and the Cowichan is still producing a few, although the weir at Cowichan Lake has been closed and the river is extremely low.

Beck tops qualifiers

POMONA, Calif. (AP) — Former champion Gary Beck took the early qualifying lead Thursday in the rain-delayed $348,450 Winternationals drag races at Los Angeles County Fairgrounds.

The 37-year-old Beck, a native of Edmonton, covered the quarter-mile course in 5.90 seconds at a finish line speed of 241.28 miles an hour as qualifying for the 19th annual Winternationals began.

Lethbridge visits for crucial games

By TOM KEYSER

Hue and cry have subsided. Tumult and shouting have died.

With the combatants now gone down separate roads, the basketball battle of B.C. is over—for the moment.

Now it's back to business.

By winning 85-78 on Tuesday, University of Victoria Vikings evened the 1978-79 exhibition series with Simon Fraser University Clansmen at one game apiece. Each team won on its own floor.

Presumably, SFU will be back next season to renew the rivalry, allowed to resume on an exhibition basis in '78 by the Canada West University Athletic Association.

Stan Stewardson's outlaw Clan has been invited to the second Pacific Rim Classic in December, along with six other Canadian university teams.

But Stewardson and UVic's Ken Shields are still haggling over arrangements for another home-and-home series.

"We love playing SFU," said Shields in his office Thursday.

"They're a great gate attraction (about 1,800 turned up at McKinnon Gym Tuesday) and great competition. We're still talking about next year and, hopefully, we'll come up with a similar arrangement."

In the meantime, Shields and his college kids are settling in for a two-weekend stand against the two toughest Canada West schools.

Lethbridge Pronghorns are in this weekend for a Friday-Saturday twin-bill, each with 8:30 p.m. starts. The Pronghorn women's team plays Victoria Vikettes both nights at 6:45.

Following that, Alberta Golden Bears are scheduled the following weekend.

"Lethbridge has its back to the wall," observed Shields of the only club to beat UVic in the conference this year. Pronghorns won by 10 in Lethbridge before Christmas.

They're in third place at 7-5, behind Alberta (9-3) and UVic (11-1).

"At least one win here is vital for Lethbridge. If they can split here, then count on us to take two from Alberta the next weekend, they figure they'll be in good shape."

The talented but inconsistent Pronghorns are led by Perry Mirkovich, third in the conference averaging 16 points a game, and Ernie Hill, with a 12.2 average.

UVic's Reni Dolcetti continues on top of the scoring sheet, with a 20.4 average and a league-leading field-goal average of 58.7. Other Vikings near the summit are guards Robbie Parris and Ian Hyde-Lay.

Parris has a 12.2 average and the surprising Hyde-Lay, devastating from the outside against the Clan, is third for Victoria with a 9.5 average.

HOOPLA — Leading the women's conference in scoring is UVic's Luanne Hebb, with a 16.4 average. . .Dick Martin of Vancouver won the weekend for two in San Francisco for submitting the winning entry in the UVic logo contest. . .Feb. 10 has been designated Robbie Parris night in honor of the hustling guard, who's capping his university career with his finest season. The game against Alberta will be the last regular-season home game for Parris.

Cauthen snaps lengthy slump

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Steve Cauthen, the 18-year-old Triple Crown-winning jockey who had fallen into a deep slump, broke his losingstreak at 110 races Thursday with a victory in the fourth race at Santa Anita.

The win, aboard Father Duffy, ended the dry spell that began Jan. 2. Father Duffy covered the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:464-5 on a muddy track. There were seven horses in the race for four-year-olds and up.

Father Duffy was in a stretch run with Vaslov when the two bumped. Vaslov appeared to tire after the contact. The stewards posted an inquiry but ruled that the two horses were equally at fault in the minor collision and took no action.

Father Duffy paid $7.60, $3.80 and $2.40. Vaslov, under Marco Casteneda, was second and paid 3.80, 2.60. Latin Touch, under Darrel McHargue, was $2.40 to show.

It was Cauthen's third race of the day. His mount in the first race was scratched. He finished dead last in the second and did not ride in the third.

Cauthen rode Affirmed to the Triple Crown last year.

Stadium plan rejected

QUEBEC (CP) — A proposal to enlarge the Quebec Colisee for a National Hockey League franchise has been checked into the boards by the Quebec Urban Community.

The administrative council, representing Quebec City and surrounding municipalities, voted Wednesday night against a motion by Quebec City mayor Jean Pelletier for a city contribution of between $1 million and $2.5 million to help enlarge the stadium to 15,000 seats from 10,000.

"In 20 years we'll be looked on as people with very little vision," Pelletier said.

Premier Rene Levesque said last week his government would put up $5 million towards expansion of the arena if Quebec Nordiques of the World Hockey Association are admitted to the NHL. He expected the city and the federal government to contribute also to the estimated $15-million project.

Levesque said the Nordiques are the only professional hockey team in North America to operate entirely in French.

The Colisee, home of the Nordiques since the inception of the WHA in 1972, is considered too small for a NHL franchise.

Porsche nabs Daytona pole

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The 24 Hours of Daytona endurance race got a surprise pole position starter and a definite Indianapolis flavor Thursday.

The unheralded turbo Porsche entry of Italians Carlo Facetti, Martino Finotto and Gianpiero Moretti earned the pole position with a record speed of 130.276 m.p.h. around Daytona International Speedway's 3.84-mile road course in the opening round of qualifying.

Facetti, who was behind the wheel on the qualifying attempt, edged out the second place qualifier by six-tenths of a second. That was another turbo Porsche qualified at 129.503 by John Fitzpatrick of England. His co-drivers are Bob Wollek of France and Manfred Schurti of Liechtenstein.

The pre-race favorites, Jacky Ickx of Belgium and Peter Gregg of Jacksonville, Fla., were third at 129.162 in another Porsche turbo.

Only the top 10 qualifiers Thursday earned starting positions in the race, which starts at 1:30 p.m. PST Saturday.

Actor Paul Newman, co-driving with Dick Barbour and Brian Redman, will start seventh on the grid. Redman qualified the car.

Haas in deadlock for lead in Crosby

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Jay Haas, fearful of a protracted letdown in the wake of a debacle at San Diego, birdied three of his first four holes, then cozied his way to a four-under-par 68 and a tie for the first-round lead Thursday in the $300,000 Bing Crosby national pro-am golf tournament.

Haas, who had rounds of 84-77 in defence of his title at San Diego last week, played well in mild, cloudy weather at Pebble Beach and shared the No. 1 position with Australian veteran Graham Marsh and Mike McCullough, both of whom were at Cypress Point.

"It may have been an advantage playing at Pebble today in relatively good conditions," said Haas. "It's like a sleeping giant. It can play 10 shots harder when the wind is blowing."

The pros play one round on each of three Monterey Peninsula courses before the final 18 holes at Pebble Beach on Sunday.

Gil Morgan, a non-practising optometrist, veteran Bobby Nichols and Mac McLendon were a single shot out of the lead at 69. Morgan, the No. 2 money-winner last season, ruined what could have been a pace-setting effort with a double-bogey seven from the water on No. 6 at Pebble Beach. Nichols played his last nine holes, at Cypress Point, in 30. McLendon also was at Cypress.

Tom Watson, who used Crosby titles as the springboard to player of the year honors the last two seasons, scored an eagle-three at Cypress Point, but could do no better than par-72.

John Mahaffey, the current Professional Golfers' Association and World Cup champion and winner of the Bob Hope event that opened the 1979 season, shot 70 at Cypress. Ben Crenshaw, a recent winner in Phoenix, Ariz., had 71 at Cypress. Lee Trevino had a struggling 75 at Pebble Beach.

Arnold Palmer, who had former president Gerald Ford as his amateur partner, took a 74 at Cypress.

Haas, who won the San Diego Open in 1978 as a tour rookie, posted a solid second-place finish the week before he was to defend his title this season.

But his soaring score of 161 for two rounds wasn't even close to making the cut for the final two rounds and he came into this tournament concerned about the possible long-range effects.

"Maybe I'd expected too much after playing so well the week before," he said.

He quickly dispelled those worries, however. The nephew of former Masters champ Bob Goalby birdied three of his first four holes, two with iron shots that nestled within six feet of the flags and the other with an 18-footer on greens that were still wet from two days of cold, wet rain.

George Knudson of Toronto was three strokes off the pace with a 71, including a back-nine score of 34. Jim Nelford of Burnaby had a 35-37—72, while Dave Barr of Kelowna shot a 41-36—77.

VISL sends five to nationals

With three of their best players in Vancouver for the weekend, University of Victoria Vikings will have their work cut out for them when Vancouver Island Soccer League Jackson Cup play resumes.

Goalkeeper Ted Van Waes, centre-back Dan Lomas and winger Peter Zachary were among six Victoria players named this week to the Canadian national squad.

Along with Dave McCaig of the Vancouver Whitecap reserves, Dan Hood of Victoria Athletics and John McGuire of Victoria West, the UVic trio will be at Empire Stadium on Sunday for an international exhibition against the U.S nationals. Kickoff is 3:30 p.m.

The 20-man national squad—including 12 players from B.C.—has been training in southern California.

UVic faces Nanaimo City on Saturday in Nanaimo.

In the feature Saturday match at Royal Athletic Park, Gorge FC tangles with Campbell River Wave of the third division.

In other Sunday games, Gorge IV meets Prospect Lake at Hampton Park; Metro Toyota II plays Austrian Chalet of the North Island League at Henderson Park; Nanaimo United I encounters Duncan Village Green III at Nanaimo and Oak Bay I plays Chez Pierre IV at Central Park.

Vault mark not okayed

LONDON (AP) — The International Amateur Athletic Federation ratified 27 world records Thursday, but Mike Tully's pole vault mark of 18 feet, 8¾ inches, was not among them.

John Holt, IAAF general secretary, said the United States vaulter's record, which was controversial because the bar had not been replaced properly before he jumped, is not likely to be ratified now.

Kenya's Henry Rono topped the list of ratifications with records for the 3,000 metres, 5,000 metres and 3,000-metre steeplechase. The IAAF said Rono's fourth record, 27:22.5 for the 10,000 metres, has not yet been ratified because the official application form has not been received.

Whitecaps add defender

VANCOUVER (CP) — Midfielder Ray Lewington of England, considered a strong defender, has signed a contract with Vancouver Whitecaps, the North American Soccer League team announced Thursday.

The Whitecaps said Lewington's contract was purchased from Chelsea of the English First Division and he agreed to terms with Vancouver coach Tony Waiters.

Lewington, 22, turned professional with Chelsea six years ago and has played 100 league and cup games with the club.

CFL trade completed

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Winnipeg Blue Bombers announced Thursday the completion of a Canadian Football League trade with Montreal Alouettes.

Blue Bombers previously sent offensive lineman Randy Halsall to Montreal.

Bombers said they have received 22-year-old tight end Craig Labbett from the eastern conference team in exchange for Halsall.

Labbett stands six feet three inches and weighs 220 pounds. The Toronto native played college football at the University of Western Ontario.

Wrexham moves on

WREXHAM, Wales (CP) — Wrexham of the English Football League's Second Division finally reached the fourth round of the Football Association Cup Thursday night by defeating Stockport County 6-2 in a match postponed nine times because of bad weather.

Playing on a snow-covered pitch, the teams were tied 1-1 at half-time but Wrexham piled it on in the second half to qualify for a fourth-round visit to First-Division Tottenham Hotspur.

Hoffmann defends crown

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Defending champion Jan Hoffmann of East Germany won his fourth European men's figure-skating crown Thursday, closely followed by the Soviet Union's Vladimir Kovalev and Britain's Robin Cousins.

Hoffman, a 25-year-old medical student, staged an impressive performance on the skating rink of the Sports Hall, after almost quitting international competition last year.

Canadians well back

VILLARS-SUR-OLLON, Switzerland (Reuter) — Peter Mueller of Switzerland won a men's World Cup downhill ski race today in one minute, 45.97 seconds.

He was followed by Austrians Leonhard Stock and Werner Griessmann who finished second in 1:46.19 and third in 1:46.20, respectively.

Top Canadian was Dave Murray of Abbotsford, who tied for 22nd spot with Sepp Buercher of Switzerland in 1:47.89. Ken Read of Calgary finished 30th in 1:48.48.

Carew upset with negotiation hassles

NEW YORK (AP) — Rod Carew said Thursday he resents being tossed around like a grocery item by baseball clubs bartering for his life.

"It's nerve-wracking—the wait, the frustration, it's terrible," said Minnesota Twins' perennial American League batting champion, speaking of stalled negotiations in his projected trade to New York Yankees.

"I don't like the idea of being pushed around, cooling my heels while they go fishing and play golf. If they think they can wait until the last minute and tell me to start packing, they are out of their minds.

"I plan to exercise my rights. I want them to know nobody can buy me—I can't be bought. I'm going out of town to get lost. If they want me, they will have to track me down."

Carew expressed his impatience after being reached by telephone at his home in Golden Valley, Minn.

The 33-year-old first baseman, with one year to go on his contract, has been trade bait since the end of last season when he expressed a desire to leave Minnesota.

A deal with California Angels fell through. Then the Yankees offered first baseman Chris Chambliss, centre fielder Juan Beniquez, two minor leaguers and close to $400,000 in cash.

This week George Steinbrenner, principal owner of the Yankees, personally got involved in the dealings, meeting with Calvin Griffith, president of the Twins, in Orlando, Fla. The talks seem to have stalled. One day Steinbrenner said he was taking off "to play golf."

Carew, seven times AL batting champion, said he was personally offended by the suggestion that "anything George wants, George gets."

"They can't sell me all that New York City stuff—you know what they say, 'Come to New York and you have all those opportunities to make money in commercial things.' I don't need that. I make my living playing baseball."

The lean, mild-mannered Panamanian said while he New York would not be his first choice as a future home, he felt he could adjust to it.

"I have a good relationship with some of the players. Thurman Munson and I have been carrying on a little friendly word war at the plate for a long time. I feel I can play anywhere. It's just that I might be more comfortable somewhere else."

Carew said he had felt good about going to the Angels.

"I went there expecting to spend a day haggling. They met my terms in 15 minutes. But Griffith upped the ante and the deal fell through."

Carew said that he had set a personal deadline—Feb. 5.

"If they don't do something by then, I will play out my option and go on the free agent market next fall."

Carew said he could not understand why the Yankees were negotiating with the Angels when they could wait a year and pick him up without compensation.

"They don't need me this year. They've got Chambliss. I think he is a heck of a ballplayer. Not only that, he is a nice guy, gets along with everybody."

Carew said he personaly preferred not to return to the Twins.

Argentine ace bounces Nancy

RANCHO MIRAGE (AP) — Silvia Bertolaccini sank a 15-foot birdie putt to beat Nancy Lopez 1-up on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff in the opening round of the $100,000 Triple Crown match play golf tournament Thursday.

The two played extremely well, although the Mission Hills Country Club course was soaked from snow the previous day and intermittent showers Thursday. Total strokes are incidental in match play, since scores are determined by holes won, but Bertolaccini finished 18 holes with a 68 and Lopez had a 69.

Bertolaccini, a 29-year-old native of Argentina who has won two Ladies Professional Golf Association tournaments in her four years on the tour, hit her approach on a second playoff hole 15 feet from the pin, then sank the putt for a four, as Lopez had to settle for a five. Both parred the first extra hole.

Defending champion JoAnne Carner was an impressive 5-and-4 winner over Debbie Massey in their opening match. Considered one of the LPGA's top match play golfers, Carner hit every green but one.

Other first-round winners were Amy Alcott, with a 2-and-1 victory over Mary Dwyer; Pat Bradley, who scored a 1-up victory over Jan Stephenson, and Sandra Post, former Oakville, Ont., resident who downed Kathy Postlewait, 5-and-4.

Bertolaccini said at one point she was ready to concede her match to Lopez, who dominated the LPGA tour in 1978 with nine victories and $189,813 in earnings.

"After I three-putted No. 17, I thought it was all over," said Bertolaccini. Lopez, who was one hole ahead going into No. 18, saw Bertolaccini win the hole with an approach shot that stopped some six inches from the pin.

"I was really pleased with the way I played," Lopez said. "It was a fine match and I was proud to be a part of it."

The tournament, with a select group of 16 and the losers dropping to the consolation bracket, wraps up Sunday with $23,000 going to the winner.

Ontario pair triumphs

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Lorri Baier of Mitchell, Ont., and Lloyd Eisler of Seaforth, Ont., gave the Preston Figure Skating Club its second gold medal at the Canadian figure skating championships Thursday when they won the junior pairs title.

Baier, 14-year-old sister of Sherri Baier who last year teamed with Robin Cowan to win the senior pairs title, and the 15-year-old Eisler performed a strong free-skating program to win the event over Preston clubmates Becky Gough and Mark Rowsom.

The Preston club, led by coach Kerry Leitch, won its first gold medal Wednesday when Rosemary Barth and Keith Davis took the novice pairs title.

Baier and Eisler topped the final results with seven ordinals—meaning all seven judges placed them first—and collected 91.92 points.

Gough and Rowsom placed second with 16 ordinals and 88.68 points. Katherina Matousek and William O'Neill of Vancouver finished third with 24 and 85.96.

Only five couples contested the junior pairs event with Mary Joe Fedy and Tim Mills, also of the Preston club, finishing fourth and Vanessa Howe and Jeff Mawle of Victoria fifth.

Earlier Thursday, defending champions in three senior events placed well in compulsories, leaving some challengers with a lot of catching up.

Conspicuous among the contenders was Vern Taylor of Toronto, an exciting, athletic free skater who put himself in a hole by finishing last in the men's singles compulsory figures.

Defending champion Brian Pockar of Calgary topped the figures, leaving Taylor with a lot of ground to cover if he is to catch up in the short program tonight and the free skating program Saturday.

Dennis Coi of Vancouver, another strong free skater who was tabbed as a strong challenger to Pockar, was also in poor position, placing seventh in the figures.

Other defending champions in good position were Lorna Wighton of Toronto and John Dowding of Oakville, Ont., who took a big lead, confirming the opinion of experts who say the dance couple is in a class by themselves.

There was a closer fight in women's singles, as expected. Deborah Albright of Toronto had a narrow lead over Janet Morrissey of Ottawa and defending champion Heather Kemkaran of Toronto.

Charlene Wong of Montreal, the 12-year-old surprise leader in junior women's singles after Wednesday's compulsories, fell back in Thursday's compulsory short program and Kay Thomson of Toronto took over the lead.

There was a similar shuffle in the junior men's rankings after Kevin Parker of Campbellville, Ont., fourth after figures, took over the lead after placing second in the short program.

Tony Preston and Cheryl MacDonald of Victoria stand 11th in junior dance following completion of compulsory and set patterns.

Giants cut Csonka loose

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Fullback Larry Csonka should never have been signed by New York Giants, says Tim Mara, the National Football League team's vice-president.

Csonka signed a three-year contract with an option year with the Giants prior to the 1976 season after playing seven years with the Miami Dolphins and one year in the World Football League.

The Giants have decided not to exercise the option year of the contract. Csonka, who rushed for more than 1,000 yards in three consecutive years with the Dolphins and twice topped 100 yards in the Super Bowl, now is free to negotiate with any team.

Mara owns 50 per cent of the Giants but only recently became involved in the day-to-day operations of the team. It was the decision of team president Wellington Mara and former director of operations Andy Rosbustelli to sign the fullback for an estimated $1 million.

"I think Larry is a terrific person, but how much did he help the Giants and how much would he in the future?" Tim Mara said. "I would never have taken Larry Csonka. I felt at that time we were in a rebuilding year. We had a young team and Csonka was not a good investment."

Csonka rushed for 7,244 yards in his 10 NFL seasons. But he gained just 569 yards in his first season with the Giants before suffering a knee injury in the 12th game of the season. He recovered to gain 464 yards in 1977 and was used sparingly in 1978, rushing for 311 yards with a team-high six touchdowns.

If Csonka signs with another NFL team, the Giants will not receive compensation. They gave up two third-round draft picks to the Dolphins for him.

Mara said the Giants still owe Csonka money, according to the terms of his contract.

"We had a deal with Csonka, whereby if we didn't pick up his option, we had to pay him a severance fee. It's a minimal thing," Mara said.

Csonka, meanwhile, has indicated he would like to return to the Dolphins or play for Miami's former offensive line coach, Monte Clark, at Detroit.

"I figure I'll take a hell of a lot less to play a hell of a lot more some other place," Csonka said.

Many questions over Superdome

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Critics say the Superdome is not suited for baseball.

They point out that New Orleans has a disproportionate poverty level and that minor league ball came to an unfortunate end in the city. Could a major league team make it in New Orleans?

Financier Edward J. DeBartolo is betting $12 million that major league baseball can.

That $12 million is what he offered owner Charles O. Finley for Oakland A's, with the American League or San Francisco Giants ready to kick in another million to sweeten the deal and bail out of a money-losing situation on San Francisco Bay.

While DeBartolo has courted other teams for the Superdome, he says the A's of the American League still look like the only team that could get here for the 1979 season. The Superdome management is not as optimistic and said earlier this week it could take until 1980 to get baseball in the Superdome.

It's still not certain how much fan interest there is in baseball.

The Class AAA Pelicans spent the 1977 season in the dome, drawing an average of 3,500 fans per game.

It's estimated that a major league team would have to average 15,000 attendance per game—or about 1.2 million for the season—just to break even.

"You bring the Yankees in with Ron Guidry three times, and you'll draw 60,000 a game," said Bill Curl, the dome's public relations officer. "That's 15 per cent of your break-even figure in just three games, and you still have 78 games to work with."

Guidry, the American League Cy Young award winner, lives in Lafayette, La., 160 miles west of here.

Another question is how much money is available for sports in New Orleans.

Of 50 major American cities, New Orleans had the highest amount of poverty in 1977, according to a research study.

Then, there is the question of the Superdome's suitability for baseball.

"There is no question it would be a hitter's park," said Curl, pointing out that five other major league parks have shorter foul lines than the dome's 318-foot lines.

It was Italian food and Italian culture for Premier Bennett Thursday night when he attended the opening of the Italian Cultural Centre in Vancouver.

This morning his travels take him to Smithers for the opening of the northern games and, on Saturday, another Social Credit mini-convention in Smithers.

Later Saturday he flies back to Vancouver for Chinese food and Chinese culture and the Miss Chinatown pageant at the Hyatt Regency.

Sunday he's in the air again, this time heading for Ottawa and the three-day first ministers' conference in Ottawa.

The premier will be back in B.C. next Thursday night to speak to the Vancouver Society of Investment Dealers on BCRIC. He ends the week in Burnaby Feb. 10 at yet another mini-convention.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe isn't providing any details, but the cabinet has come up with the $5,312.76 "due to apparent shortages" in the Campbell River court registry previous to 1977.

He didn't explain "apparent", nor did he provide any explanation as to how the "apparent shortage" came about.

Wolfe did hint that safekeeping practices might have been a little shoddy over the years and that funds had been provided to buy "a large safe to safeguard money and records; locked cash drawers . . . and a reduction in the number of staff handling money."

A stamp metre has also been provided and new trust accounts opened.

No charges have been laid.

●

An overpass will be built at Helmcken Road on the Trans-Canada Highway.

Dura Construction was the low bidder at $161,655.

The overpass will be used primarily by school children.

When automobile licence plates are changed this year they will be recycled to help raise funds for Kinsmen Club projects.

The service club will distribute 45-gallon drums throughout the province as drop-points. The plates will be sold for scrap with the money collected used for charitable purposes.

Environment Minister Rafe Mair has released his Wildlife Management Plan as an invitation "to stimulate public discussion."

The plan contains information on philosophy, policy and problems of wildlife management and specifically outlines the objectives of Fish and Wildlife Branch.

At least one public meeting will be held later this spring but Mair is inviting open comment before that. He has promised that all comments would be reviewed and, if worthy, included in the revised plan.

Copies can be obtained from any regional office of the fish and wildlife branch.

TOKYO (AP) — A Chinese literary journal, silenced 13 years ago in Mao Tse-tung's Cultural Revolution, resumes publication this month.

Two rescue boats added

Two new marine rescue vessels have been bought for rescue work off the coast of Vancouver Island.

Environment Minister Rafe Mair announced the purchases Thursday and stated that one boat would be located at Oak Bay, the other in the Nanaimo area.

The 5.2-metre boats are similar to ones used in the North Sea for rescue work.

Taxpayers wishing to watch their dollars in action will be able to see the vessels perform in the Inner Harbor off the Causeway at 1 p.m. today.

While operating on a volunteer basis, the provincial marine rescue service has 1,000 volunteers on its roster and 130 registered boats at its disposal.

SOMETHING HAPPENS WHEN YOU GET INSIDE AN RX-7. THE RX-7 GETS INSIDE YOU.

There are but a few cars in this world that can actually get under your skin.

The RX-7 is one of these cars.

The RX-7 gets inside you the moment you slide into its comfortable reclining bucket seat. Your hands fall exactly at the wheel and the major controls are waiting within palm's reach. Now you're ready to ignite pure dynamite.

Start the engine. Go! You bolt from 0 to 100 km per hour in 8.7 seconds. Yet, the rotary engine is smooth and quiet. The shift is precise.

The fat steel-belted radials grip the road like flypaper. And the steering is a matter of pointing the nose in the desired direction.

You and the RX-7 are one.

But mere words are hardly enough to describe this car. You must experience the RX-7 to know what it is all about. And your Mazda dealer would be happy to satisfy your urge. Call him to arrange a test-drive you will never forget.

'FREE' SHARES $24 MILLION

Canadian Press

Provincial taxpayers will pay at least $24 million to receive "free" shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp., Victor Stephens, provincial Progressive Conservative leader, said Wednesday.

Stephens said that instead of being an exercise in free enterprise, the share distribution represented massive political interference in what was supposed to be an independent corporation and would result in a colossal and costly foulup.

He said it cost the Insurance Corp. of B.C. $24 million each year just to renew insurance policies for fewer than half the number of persons that would be dealt with in the share distribution, which he said would probably cost more.

Premier Bennett announced in January that all eligible residents of the province could apply to receive five free shares in the investment corporation, which owns pulp mills, sawmills and oil and gas rights.

The shares have an estimated value of $10 each.

Stephens also said the cost of distributing dividends, if any were ever declared, would exceed the dividends' value.

The government should spare the cost of the share giveaway and either sell the corporation itself or sell shares in the normal fashion at a realistic price, the Tory leader said.

B.C. ranks high in tourism gains

Tourism in B.C. was up an over-all 6.6 per cent in 1978 compared with the national average of 0.8 per cent.

Tourism Minister Elwood Veitch said Thursday that figures released in latest reports applied to the first 11 months of last year.

December figures had not yet been compiled on a cross-country basis.

DURING THE 11 months B.C. had on a one-or-more-nights basis 1,887,807 visitors compared with 1,770,360 in 1977.

The total number of visitors coming to B.C., including day trippers, was 3,440,400.

The Yukon and Prince Edward Island actually nudged B.C. out of top spot percentage-wise with 7.1 and 13.2 per cent increases but the actual numbers—453 tourists for one night or more in the Yukon and 134,945 in P.E.I.—were relatively small.

B.C.'S BIGGEST gains came in overseas traffic with entries from overseas, up 21.7 per cent in the 11 months.

Ferry traffic was up 18.8 per cent, room sales increased by 17 per cent and restraurant sales by 12.3 per cent.

Hotel occupancy was up 7.4 per cent with the average occupancy for the 11 months hitting 69.3 per cent.

THE OCCUPANCY success story was still continuing in November, Veitch said, when figures showed the highest occupancy level since 1974 and an 11.2 per cent increase over November, 1977.

In the Rogers' Pass, traffic was up 10.7 per cent.

Veitch said he would release the full year's statistics as soon as they were available.

Land-use conflict predicted in selloff

The B.C. Federation of Agriculture said Thursday the provincial government's decision to sell 60 million acres of crown land would lead to land-use conflict.

The federation said in its annual brief to the cabinet that leased crown range was an integral part of many farming and ranching operations in the B.C. Interior.

The federation also called on the Legislature's standing committee on agriculture to wind up its work. It said the committee was nearing the end of its second year of operation, double its original mandate, and any further extension would create speculation and uncertainty in the agricultural sector.

Dick Erickson displays some of his antique telephones in his garage

Colonist—Los Angeles Times Service

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif.—Dick Erickson keeps a call girl in the garage of his home.

But before the vice squad rolls, be advised that the girl is a mannequin. She represents an old-fashioned switchboard operator.

Erickson has good reason for such a tableau. He collects rare old telephones and has one of the largest such accumulations on the continent—more than 300 and most of them in working condition.

"See this one," he said, pecking on something that looked like a typewriter. "It was called a Typewriter Dialer and it was used in England during the Second World War. It had 10 keys and you punched out a phone number just as if you were writing a letter."

Another of his models, popular at the turn of the century, was worn like a stethoscope, with the caller speaking into a mouthpiece that almost encircled his mouth like a gag.

The 43-year-old Erickson is a field representative with Pacific Telephone and so perhaps it was inevitable that one day seven years ago, while poking around in an antique shop, he gravitated toward a phone in the shape of the Eiffel Tower.

And now the walls of his garage are lined not only with that one, but with just about every model since Alexander Graham Bell became the first person not to get a busy signal.

One is a fine old six-foot oaken cabinet that even took silver dollars.

"In those days, around 1890, a transcontinental call cost $22," Erickson said. "This particular model took dollars, half-dollars, quarters, dimes and nickels. Each slot made a different tone, and a long-distance call made a lot of music, but you needed a lot of coins."

The reason for the height of the cabinet, he went on, was to accommodate large glass batteries.

"There was no electronics, so you cranked up to reach the operator, she would tell you how much to deposit, and then she would listen for the sounds of the various coins.

"And in those days the calls were measured in quarter-minute intervals."

In the early years of phones, the public apparently was concerned over the possibility of disease transmission, because some of Erickson's models boast germ-proof glass mouthpieces, complete with red crosses. They were boiled and replaced on a regular schedule.

One version that was in vogue for a while was the hug-a-phone, which required the caller to speak into a box-type mouthpiece and thus ensure safety from eavesdroppers.

"Some of my phones have wooden bells," Erickson said. "They make a rat-tat-tat sound as if it was a woodpecker."

He has them all, even one from the Queen Mary which advises: "You can telephone to any part of the world whilst at sea."

On and on goes the collection. We would tell you more, but your three minutes are up.

Saint Laurent hot on pants

PARIS (AP) — Yves Saint Laurent came out loud and clear for trousers today in a great collection that owed more to his own past than to anybody else's.

While most couturiers have spurned pants, the Rothschilds and other jet-set clients applauded Saint Laurent's elegant suits in an eminently wearable collection made extraordinary by the color and fabric combinations and bold fantasy jewelry.

Saint Laurent's straight cuffed or uncuffed trousers, tucked at the waist, and slit or wraparound skirts, hovering around knee-length, were topped by wide-shouldered jackets with puffy sleeves or the pagoda-upturned shoulder look.

When the suits came out topped by white or bright pink linen jackets and scarves, they got a big hand for their cheery spring color.

Women dissatisfied with job prospects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor force analysts are contending that no matter what a woman's occupation, she is likely to be unhappy with her earnings and prospects for advancement.

Those conclusions emerged in the preliminary results of a survey of 150,000 women in the United States.

Joan Goodin, executive director of the National Commission on Working Women, said 80 per cent of the women in the workforce were concentrated in low-paying low-status jobs.

She said a basic problem with the U.S. economy was that it generated large numbers of these undesirable jobs, whether they were held by men or women, and made it difficult to upgrade them.

The survey responses were obtained by publishing the questionnaire in national women's magazines and labor publications. About 150,000 women—full-time workers, unpaid homemakers, the unemployed and some who are hunting jobs—answered.

Early survey results were based on analysis of 42,000 responses.

Of those, 43 per cent of the women in professional and managerial jobs and 59 per cent of those in "pink-collar" jobs, such as sales and secretarial positions, and blue-collar jobs were dissatisfied with the lack of opportunity for advancement.

Half of the women, no matter what their occupations, cited among their problems the burden of both maintaining a job and caring for a family, lack of help in doing work at home and lack of time for leisure.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: We three gals who work in the same office share a very nice apartment. Sue and I get along great, but the third gal, Louise, is a pain in the neck. She monopolizes the phone and does less than her share of cooking. When it's her turn to dust, she drags the cloth over the table and calls it "finished."

Louise does have some good points — a great disposition, plus she is smashing looking and has more dates than she can handle. She's generous with the overflow and we have profited from that. She also makes more money than we do and pays the gas and electric bills. And, oh yes — Louise is friendly with the butcher down the street and he brings over some choice cuts of meat.

Sue and I have considered getting rid of Louise, but maybe the next one would be worse. We need a third party to carry the financial load. What is your opinion? —In A Quandary

Dear Quandary: The pain in the neck you describe sounds like the kind of roommate most women would adore. There are worse faults than not being able to dust properly and talking on the phone a lot. If you figure the pluses against the minuses, you'll see that Louise looks awfully good on the score sheet.

Wine's just fine to shower on couples

TORONTO (CP) — The cost of home entertaining can put a strain on a newlywed couple's budget.

That's why friends might want to give a his and her wine shower before the marriage.

It is a fairly new trend, but one that Dieter Guttler, winemaster of Jordan and Stewart Cellars says is increasing in popularity.

"Wine is fun to give and receive and having a selection of wines on hand for any occasion gives great pleasure to the couple."

Guttler says there are other practical advantages.

Wine comes in great variety—dry to sweet; red, white and rose; still and sparkling—to suit every taste and budget.

"Compared to many other shower gifts, wine can be relatively inexpensive.

"MANY QUALITY WINES are priced under $4 a bottle which can ease the financial burden for family members and close friends who must attend several showers for the couple."

If you are planning to host a wine shower, the key to success, says Guttler, is a well-chosen selection of wines.

"Remember that the purpose of the wine shower is to provide the couple with a selection of wines to suit a variety of occasions and tastes."

He recommends the following selection for a wine shower with 15 guests. The suggested quantities should be adjusted to suit the tastes and needs of each couple.

Sizes are 750 ml except where otherwise indicated.

Apertif wine (vermouth)—one.

Wine or cocktail—one four-pack carrier.

Table wine (still and sparkling)—four red; four white; two rose.

Dessert wine—one cream (sweet) sherry; one dry sherry.

Champagne—two.

Guttler says the hosts and hostess should consider the couple's taste in wine. The most basic preference is for either sweeter or drier wine.

HE SUGGESTS TO build your selection around this preference, including a few bottles of their favorite wines, if these are known.

"Give guests specific information, written on their invitation cards about the wines they should buy," he says. "Since most of the wine will be used for entertaining, you'll need to round out the selection with a variety of wines to suit many guests whose tastes may be unknown to you."

These pointers to taste preferences should help.

Men tend to prefer red wines; women white. Rose is enjoyed by both sexes.

Younger adults tend to favor low-alcohol sparkling wines and wine cocktails. But if they're accustomed to drinking wine with meals, they're more likely to prefer dry table wines.

Desert wines are enjoyed by all age groups, but especially by adults over age 45.

The lifestyles of the couple and their families and friends can be a good lead to their wine tasts, Guttler says.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Ruble: This is really scary. I choke to the point of not being able to draw my breath. It happens only when drinking liquids. I'm an extremely slow eater and drinker. I live alone and am truly fightened. Can you comment? — Mrs. L.M.S.

This might be achalasia, for which you should be checked promptly. I can be related to a nerve problem. The esophagus behaves somewhat like the other parts of the alimentary canal. It depends on the movement of special fibers lining the inner wall (peristalsis). When this is inhibited there may be choking. X-rays will show the state of your esophagus. Treatment can be either surgical or by forcible dilation (stretching) of the gullet. Meanwhile, continue to swallow very slowly and chew food carefully. Nerves (emotions) may contribute to this.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Should a woman who is nursing a baby use tetracycline? — Mrs. H. F.

Not unless the need for it is overwhelming. It may discolor the teeth of nursing infants. Nor should it be used by pregnant women — for the same reason.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am 62 years old and in good health. My problem is that I am always cold. In winter, when I sit down at the end of a day to read the paper I am miserable. I just cannot stand the cold. What am I lacking? — Mrs. A. B.

Well, I could mention a lot of fancy things that could (and might) be wrong with you — thyroid and all the rest. But I know of too many people like you who lack one thing — the common sense to wear warmer clothing when they are chilly indoors. No law prohibits it. Try that first and see if you do not have the "clothing deficiency syndrome." Then look to the other problems.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Do you advise a woman who is pregnant to continue taking part in contact sports? Like basketball? — J. Z.

No, particularly not after the first three months. The pelvis provides excellent protection for the uterus, but as pregnancy progresses the uterus enlarges and is in a more vulnerable position, where a sharp, direct blow might cause some injury to it. Basketball has been defined by some as a "collision" sport.

AVIS AUX PARENTS FRANCOPHONES

Le Ministere de l'Education de la C-B a elabore un programme cadre elementaire (annees M a 7) dont la langue d'enseignement sera le francais.

Le contenu du programme sera equivalent a celui du programme cadre donne en anglais.

Ce programme ne sera pas de type immersion destine aux eleves qui veulent apprendre le francais langue seconde. Neanmoins, en cas de disponsibilite de places, les enfants de parentage non-francophone y seront admis, pourvu qu'ils possedent une comprehension suffisante de la langue francaise.

Il se peut que, dependant du lieu ou se donnera le programme, certains eleves doivent changer d'ecole.

En vue de preparer le programme, la Commission scolaire a besoin de determiner le nombre d'eleves qui voudrait s'y inscrire.

ATTENTION FRANCOPHONE PARENTS

The B.C. Ministry of Education has developed an elementary (Grades K-7) core curriculum using French as the language of instruction.

This is a program primarily for children of Francophone parents. Children must be capable of being taught prescribed subjects in the French language. No other language will be used in this program (except for English as a second language subject).

The curriculum will parallel the English language core curriculum.

This will not be an immersion-type program for students wishing to learn French as a second language. However, space permitting, children of non-Francophone parents may be admitted if the children have sufficient understanding of French.

Depending on the location of the program, pupils may have to change schools.

In preparation for the program, the School Board needs to know how many pupils might enroll.

If you are interested and your family qualifies, please complete and mail the form below, before January 26 1979 It is an expression of interest, not a commitment.

Thigh muscle transplanted into forearm

TORONTO (CP) — Murry Parlee was recovering this week from an operation at Toronto General Hospital during which a second thigh muscle was transplanted into his forearm so that he will once again have full use of his right hand.

Parlee, a 43-year-old sergeant in the Royal Canadian Regiment who lives in Oromocto, N.B., had his arm crushed under a 4,000-pound army scout car that overturned in an accident about three years ago.

The muscles in the forearm died and had to be removed when the crushed blood vessels did not provide enough blood.

The broken bones eventually healed and a graft of abdominal skin replaced skin torn away in the accident, but he was left with an arm from elbow to hand which was literally skin and bone—all muscle had gone.

Dr. Ralph Manktelow, head of plastic surgery at Toronto General, performed Parlee's first operation last year which involved removing a muscle, complete with its blood supply and its nerve, from one place in the body and transplanting it to where it was needed.

The muscles being used for Parlee's arm are the gracilis muscles that run down the inside of the thigh from groin to knee. Although they help in moving the legs inward, they are not essential—other muscles can do the job adequately.

"So much depends on the patient in this kind of thing," Dr. Manktelow said. "The surgeon's work is in vain unless the patient works too."

FOOD FOR THOUGHT . . .
BY DANIEL RIGOLLET

Chicken salad? Pep up that mayonnaise with a teaspoon of curry.

To make baked apples even better, leave a "floor" of apple when you scoop out the core. It will hold in the filling.

Attractive on the plate: lightly saute canned baby carrots in butter, salt and lemon juice. Sprinkle with nutmeg before serving.

Good red wine will change color (to a transparent brown) when cooked. If it turns lollipop purple, though, something may be wrong.

World's largest pizza — 80 feet in diameter — was made recently in Wilton, N.Y. That's a lot of pepperoni. Wonder who sent out for THAT?

"The fellow who succeeds admits it, but a failure can always dig up an alibi." – Kin Hubbard.

Many players follow the general maxim, "Always return your partner's lead." As with most cliches, this advice might succeed some of the time, but no general rule can replace constructive thought. Look over East's problem in today's challenging game and let's examine the options after he wins the opening lead.

West gets off on the right foot when he leads a diamond. His probable second choice of a heart gives declarer a free finesse and there is plenty of time to develop nine tricks.

East wins the ace of diamonds and must decide what to do. If he returns a diamond, automatically, declarer ducks and West wins, but declarer is now safe for nine tricks. West cannot attack the heart suit without giving up a trick and declarer scores the game and rubber.

Obviously, the diamond return is not the best play. Why? When East wins the diamond ace, he can see by the play of the spot cards (West's four and dummy's deuce) that West has led a four-card suit. Therefore, declarer is also marked with a four-card suit.

And if declarer holds either the king or queen of diamonds, a diamond return will do little for the defense (besides, since East is looking at the ace of clubs, he can make the diamond play later if it is indicated).

On the other hand, if West holds four hearts with either top honor, East can beat the game if East shifts to a heart at trick two.

After winning the diamond ace, East shifts to the heart jack and declarer correctly plays the ace (West encourages by playing his seven). Then when East is in with his ace of clubs, another heart lead traps declarer's queen of hearts and the defenders take three hearts, one diamond and one club.

First odorless home sanctuary for family

GOODWOOD, Ont. (UPC) — To build Canada's first odorless home, Bruce Small and his family have literally tested almost every brick and board by nose.

"It was a lengthy process that took almost two years," Small laughs. "Not the most scientific way, but it's certainly the most practical."

"We went through 12 different mixes of plaster. There is little scientific information available. You have to resort to sniffing. If the material in question made me drowsy and I felt like falling asleep, we knew we definitely couldn't live with it."

Small, his wife, Barbara, and four-year-old daughter, Carolyn, suffer from a disease so rare that it doesn't even have a scientific name. They are allergic to everything from the odor of wood to the printer's ink on dollar bills.

Small estimates it will cost $220,000 for the 6,000-square-foot sanctuary for his family. He estimates another $180,000 was spent designing the house and testing and searching for replacements to standard construction materials. So far, he's paying for the whole project himself.

Small hopes eventually to market a refined, less-expensive version of his prototype. The Candian Mortgage and Housing Corp. is considering his request for a construction subsidy.

Small says there are models similar to his in the United States, "but this is the first in Canada and the most advanced to date anywhere."

He's trying to persuade the federal department of public works to consider his home a model in the construction of federal office buildings. The most recent offices and homes are "horrible because they are sealed off from the outer air due to the emphasis on heat conservation," he says. So far federal officials have "just listened patiently."

The Smalls' dream home is constructed almost entirely of neutral materials: the shell was built from concrete and steel; the floors are made of a special strain of odorless maple.

The Smalls eventually chose plaster walls, made of pure plaster of paris and lime. They've been left bare. "Its a bit sterile," Small admits, but says after two years of testing no paint has been found that they can tolerate.

The National Research Council in Ottawa is running tests to try to come up with a tolerable paint mix.

The Smalls can't use wood paneling because they're allergic to both the wood and the glues used in lamination.

The house uses two ventilation systems. A large fan situated on the roof pulls air through the house and ventilates the spaces between walls where stale dust-laden air accumulates.

Each room also has its own independent ventilation duct equipped with purifying filters and a built-in hood to draw off fumes from electric appliances.

Bruce's wife, Barbara, plans to design much of the furniture using stainless steel frames and cotton fabric. Beds are a special problem, she says, since many mattresses are stuffed with synthetics and chemically treated against fire and mildew.

The home is expected to be completed this spring.

U.S. KIDNEY IN RUSSIAN

MOSCOW (AFP) — The life of a Soviet woman has been saved by the transplant of a kidney from the United States, Tass news agency says. The kidney was sent from New York and reached the patient 27 hours after it was taken from the American donor. Medical co-operation between the Rogozen Kidney Centre of Cornell University in New York state and the Moscow Institute began two years ago.

Estrogen halt reduces risks

BOSTON (AP) — The high risk of uterine cancer among women who take estrogen during menopause declines dramatically when the women stop using the medicine, a new study indicates.

The study showed that middle-aged women who use estrogen are 20 times more likely than non-users to develop cancer of the uterine lining. But six months after they stop using the drugs, the risk declines to almost the same level as the non-users.

"In the face of the very high risk that long-term users run—about one to three to per cent per year—it should be very reassuring to learn that this risk can be reversed so quickly," said Dr. Hershel Jick, who directed the study.

A report on the research, conducted at Boston University Medical School, was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The Boston doctors said the risk of cancer of the endometrium, the uterine lining, was greatest in those who took the drugs for more than five years.

Women take estrogen to relieve the symptoms of menopause.

The doctors' discovery that women who use estrogen have a one to three per cent risk each year of developing uterine cancer is the first time that the absolute risk of this therapy has been calculated. The risk for non-users is 0.1 per cent.

Despite this, however, the doctors said that short-term use of the medicine for a few months was probably relatively safe.

Provincial Court

A 21-year-old woman who pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court Thursday to her second breach of probation in less than a year was given her second jail term for the offence.

Enola Jean Evans, of 638 Constance, entered the change of plea before Judge William Ostler after she was arrested on a warrant for failing to appear in court Nov. 27.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Evans was placed on six months' probation May 12, 1978 when she was given a five-month jail term for breach of probation. Conditions attached to the probation period, Mulligan stated, were to remain in the jurisdiction of the court (Victoria) and to notify the court of any change in address.

Evans' mother notified a probation officer Sept. 18 that her daughter was leaving for Vancouver, Mulligan said.

The original offence occurred last July when Evans pleaded guilty to obtaining transportation by fraud and received a suspended sentence, six months' probation and 40 hours of community service work, Mulligan said.

●

Ostler questioned the mental status of a 22-year-old woman who could not stop grinning and laughing during her appearance in court Thursday morning.

Maria Lemmen, of 1122 Collinson, changed her plea to guilty on a shoplifting charge and was remanded until Feb. 22 for a pre-sentence report.

Mulligan said Lemmen took cheese and cookies valued at $2.86 from a Safeway store at Fort and Foul Bay on Jan. 11 without paying for the items and was arrested.

●

June 8 was the date set for a preliminary hearing of a charge of possession of cocaine for the purpose of trafficking against two persons.

Barrie Paul Dale, 30, of 1322 Ivy Place, and Kathy Barbara Sharpe, 17, of Vancouver, were jointly charged Jan. 24 in Sidney.

Defence lawyer Robin Dalziel changed the election of trial method on behalf of Dale from judge without jury to judge and jury after defence lawyer Peter Freeman elected the latter method on behalf of Sharpe.

●

A 36-year-old man who stole a power sander from The Bay on Nov. 15 because he was tired of being on welfare and needed money was given a suspended sentence, nine months' probation and 150 hours of community service work.

Andrew Paul Matwick entered a change of plea to a charge of theft under $200. Mulligan noted that Matwick's criminal record dated back to October, 1959 and that his most recent conviction was on Nov. 7, 1975 in Victoria for arson, for which he received a two-year jail sentence.

Defence lawyer Malcolm Macaulay asked the court to note that Matwick had been on $200-a-month welfare for some time and that Matwick's rent took more than half of the monthly amount. Macaulay pointed out that on the 15th of the month Matwick had only $1 left on which to live and that the theft was a "foolish and frustrated reaction to his financial situation."

He also stated that Matwick had never been given a chance to perform on probation during his life and that he wished to have that opportunity.

●

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: George Stephen Griffith, 50, of 10204 Third Street, $500; Carl Walter Newcombe, 20, of 6334 Northridge Crescent, $400; Robert Clark, 19, of 2853 Heath Drive, $400; and William Starck, 67, of 495 Walter, $400.

Rights panel eyes minister

By STEPHEN HUME
Colonist reporter

The B.C. Human Rights Commission will consider action regarding Municipal Affairs Minister William Vander Zalm's use of the word "frog," a derogatory term for French-Canadians.

Commission chairman Margaret Strongitharm said in an interview Thursday from Nanaimo that Vander Zalm's use of the word in a song he wrote and sang publicly was "unfortunate," and was "undoubtedly offensive to some people, particularly the francophone community."

She said, "I think sometimes we say these things in jest without intending to be hurtful, but they are sort of discriminatory anyway."

Mrs. Strongitharm said the commission would discuss the Vander Zalm matter next Tuesday at its regular monthly meeting in Vancouver and an announcement would follow.

Meanwhile, several Ottawa MPs in nationally broadcast interviews this week expressed outrage at Vander Zalm's use of the word and criticized him for aggravating tensions at a time when Canadians were considering the future of biculturalism.

A French-language Canadian Broadcasting Corporation radio program from Montreal reported Thursday that Vander Zalm recently sued the Victoria Times because he found a cartoon unamusing and libellous, yet the minister believed his use of the word "frog" was amusing.

The blowup over Vander Zalm's remarks recalls a much publicized controversy in 1976, when U.S. agriculture secretary Earl Butz was fired after telling a joke in private conversation about "niggers."

However, Vander Zalm's job in the B.C. cabinet appears secure.

Premier Bennett defended the minister Thursday and said he would not take action against him because he understood that Vander Zalm's use of the word "frog" was humorous.

Bennett said he was "willing to accept" Vander Zalm's "interpretation of humor."

Federation des Franco-Colombiens, representing about 40,000 French-Canadians in B.C., on Thursday compared the word "frog" to "nigger," saying it was considering legal action against Vander Zalm.

Federation public information officer Christiane Cote said Thursday in a phone interview from Vancouver, "It is well known that the expression 'frog' is felt as racist by the people concerned and that its implications can be related to the expression 'nigger' used in the United States to designate black people.

"At the moment the matter is under study and we will be asking our counsellors to advise us about the legal aspect of the problem.

"We specifically regret the fact that this incident happened at a time when Premier Bill Bennett is working hard to put forward the concept of a united Canada."

Vander Zalm said in an interview this week that he used "frog" to refer to Quebec Premier Rene Levesque. He sang the song at a Social Credit convention in Williams Lake over the weekend, and afterward repeated the verses in several newspaper and broadcast interviews.

Cricketers get hope of $20,000

The Victoria and District Cricket Asociation will get a $20,000 grant for the construction of a new clubhouse in Beacon Hill Park, if Victoria council approves a recommendation from its finance committee.

The association's old clubhouse burned down last year and the cost of building a new one is estimated at about $60,000.

The committee rejected a request for financial support of a campaign to purchase Sidney Island.

Probation for theft

Andrew Duncan Jarvis, 23, of Langford was given a suspended sentence in Victoria county court Thursday and placed on probation for two years by Judge M.L.T. Drake.

He pleaded guilty Jan. 18 to breaking and entering and theft of groceries at Capital Market, 50 West Burnside, on Feb. 17, 1978.

FREEDOM FOR PATTY

She's 'more mature, and self-confident'

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — Patricia Hearst, the young heiress-turned-bank robber, left federal prison Thursday for a joyful homecoming.

"There it is—the commutation!" she said, grinning outside the prison and waving the document signed Monday by President Carter to cut short her seven-year bank robbery sentence.

She is free for the first time in five years, after being a kidnap victim, an armed bank robber, a fugitive, and finally a prisoner.

She told reporters that she planned to take a vacation but would not say when or where. Then she hopped into a station wagon with her fiance Bernard Shaw, her attorney and two bodyguards for the drive to her mother's home in Hillsborough, a San Francisco suburb.

Later she told television crews and photographers that she felt the trials of the past five years had matured her.

"I think I've gotten a lot stronger, a lot more self-confident. I take a lot of things in stride that make other people fall apart," she said.

The commutation document allowed her release after 23 months in prison. She would have been eligible for parole July 11.

Miss Hearst's mother, Catherine, waiting outside when her daughter came home, hugged and kissed her as she stepped from the car.

Her millionaire father, San Francisco Examiner president Randolph Hearst, arrived later and said he was able to detect a long-missing glint in his daughter's eyes.

"She has her sparkle back and I think she'll be okay," said Hearst.

William Harris, who with his wife, Emily, is serving a 10-year-to-life sentence for the kidnapping, said in an interview on ABC-TV's Good Morning America show Thursday that he was not bitter about Miss Hearst's early release.

But Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, said Thursday that calls and telegrams to the White House were largely opposed to the president's decision.

Miss Hearst was a 19-year-old coed at the University of California on Feb. 4, 1974, when she was dragged screaming from the Berkeley apartment she shared with her fiance, Steven Weed.

As weeks passed, she sent taped communiques to radio stations that said she had been offered her freedom but had decided to "stay and fight." She reviled her parents on the tapes, calling them "pigs."

Nine weeks after her kidnapping, four SLA members robbed a San Francisco bank of $10,060 and wounded two bystanders. Miss Hearst was photographed inside the bank, a military carbine slung over her arm.

Indicted by a federal grand jury, she became a fugitive, eluding one of the most extensive FBI manhunts ever for more than a year.

Finally, on Sept. 18, 1975, she was arrested in a San Francisco apartment she shared with another fugitive, Wendy Yoshimura.

Despite being defended by famed defence lawyer F. Lee Bailey, she was convicted of armed bank robbery after a two-month trial in 1976 and sentenced to seven years in prison. She was free on $1-million bail for eight months during unsuccessful appeals.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

Further to my notes in my last column on flowering and evergreen shrubs, I should point out that growth habits vary tremendously in size, height, shape and season of bloom, so your shrub border plantings should never look monotonous.

Some shrubs are upright and columnar in form, some low and spreading, some globe shaped, some vase shaped. Lilacs, for instance, are tall and leggy, while Deutzia gracilis is dwarf and compact.

Contrasts in foliage also can make for interesting effects. For instance, you can play the large, bold leaves of the rhododendron or the oak-leafed hydrangea against the feathery foliage of the tamarix.

One of the best ways to use shrubs is in a bed of their own—a shrub border—along the property line where it will also serve as a screen to ensure privacy.

Make your shrub border as long as you want, governing its width by the space available. Rather than having a straight edge to the bed, it will look better in bold, sweeping curves—not finnicky little squiggles—put in what might be called a free-form line.

A good way to lay out such a line is to arrange the garden hose on the ground, changing and altering the sweep of its curves until you have a shape that pleases the eye.

At its narrowest point, the bed may only be one shrub deep, but where it widens, there may be room for two or even three.

You could bung your shrubs in any old way and still come up with a fairly attractive effect, but a really distinctive planting will combine tall, medium and short shrubs arranged informally—bringing the tall ones forward here and there along the length of the bed rather than lining them up like soldiers in the rear rank.

Give due consideration to flowering time, flower and leaf color, leaf texture and the architectural shape of each shrub to produce an interesting effect at all seasons of the year. Your nurseryman's advice can be invaluable here.

There is a tendency on the part of the novice to plant only one shrub of each kind, which produces a rather spotty effect. It is better, for over-all harmony, to group several of a kind together, in much the same way as in planting a perennial border.

Many of our common shrubs are fairly quick-growing and should attain their full growth in about three years. It is best, then, to give them plenty of elbow room from the very beginning. If this is not done, your shrubs will need constant pruning to avoid overcrowding; this tends to spoil their natural grace and form, to say nothing of making extra work in what was supposed to be a labor-saving garden.

A good general rule is to allow tall shrubs seven to eight feet in which to spread themselves, the medium five to six feet and the low bushes three to four feet. Columnar species will need a little less room, spreading kinds a little more.

Using the curves of your arranged garden hose as a guide, cut the edge of your shrub border with the half-moon edging iron—a most useful tool. If the plot is in lawn, skim off the sod. It can be used for patching bad spots in the lawn, or chopped up small and used in the lower levels of the planting pits when planting your shrubs, or stacked, grass side down, in a corner of the backyard to rot down into useful fibrous loam.

With the sod removed, dig over or rototill the bed, incorporating plenty of old rotted manure plus a generous sprinkle of 6-8-6 or 5-10-5 garden fertilizer.

Make your planting holes not too deep but of ample width, for it is important to spread the roots out widely without any cramping or bending. Plant at the same depth as the specimens were growing in the nursery, as indicated by the soil marks on the stem, or perhaps just a trifle deeper.

For those of you who didn't hear President Carter's speech last week or did hear it but weren't quite sure what he said, I would like to give a Reader's Digest version of the talk. These are some of the questions and answers the president discussed:

Q—How is the State of the Union?

A—Sound.

Q—What kind of foundation are we building?

A—A "new foundation" for a peaceful and prosperous world.

Q—How have we begun to build this foundation?

A—Together.

Q—What has inflation done to this country?

A—Wrecked it.

Q—What is inflation?

A—A burden for all Americans but a disaster for the poor, the sick and the old.

Q—What does the government have to do to make the president's anti-inflation program work?

A—Its part.

Q—Will it be easy for Congress to hold down federal excess spending?

A—No.

Q—What do we have to do for unemployed Americans?

A—Provide jobs.

Q—How long have the American people waited for hospital costs to stop skyrocketing?

A—Long enough.

Q—How do the American people feel about the influence of private lobbying groups and the flood of private campaign money which threatens our electoral process?

A—Powerless.

Q—Which superpower will dominate the world?

A—None can and none will.

Q—What are our choices?

A—Anarchy and destruction or co-operation and peace.

Q—Do we have the desire to become the world's policeman?

A—No.

Q—What do we want to be known as?

A—The world's peacemaker.

Q—How are our ties with Japan and our European allies?

A—Stronger than ever.

Q—Have we won new respect in this hemisphere with the Panama Canal treaties?

A—Yes.

Q—What kind of an era are we entering with one-fourth of the world's people living in China?

A—A hopeful one.

Q—At the same time, what will we do to guarantee a prosperous, peaceful and secure life for the people of Taiwan?

A—Make a commitment.

Q—How are the Soviets expected to negotiate while discussing S.A.L.T. II?

A—In good faith.

Q—What kind of S.A.L.T. II treaty will President Carter not sign?

A—One that cannot be verified.

Q—What is the thing Americans need not fear?

A—Change.

Q—What are the messages a bold generation of Americans is sending us across the centuries?

A—Justice, equality, unity, sacrifice, liberty, faith and love.

Q—What does the president want us all to do to bring about a better world for ourselves and children?

A—Join him in building his "new foundation," which should be a better foundation than we have at the moment.

Q—Is that it?

A—Yes, but there will be a test next week and anyone who fails it will be dropped from the Social Security rolls and could be asked to take Jay Solomon's job at the General Services Administration.

Sydney Harris

Everyone knows that the mental disturbance called "paranoia" gives the patient a distorted sense of reality: he sees through a glass darkly, and what he sees is mostly the product of his own emotions.

What makes this form of lunacy so dangerous is not merely that its victim distorts the world around him; it is that he mistakes the motives, moods and reactions of other people. He is incapable of understanding how other people feel, think, and respond.

When fanatics immolate themselves, or burn themselves, or commit suicide in the act of terrorism, they imagine that this will impress other people with their sincerity and dedication to a cause higher than themselves. They do not suppose for a minute that other people will simply think them to be crazy.

But this is what people do think: they are revolted by the act, not impressed or inspired. While it may be, in some instances, noble to die for a cause higher than oneself, when it is done for purposes of demonstration, it becomes the gesture of a warped mind, not the submission of a saint.

Socrates had no desire to take the hemlock. He defended himself vigorously at his trial. As little did Joan of Arc yearn to be burned at the stake. She wanted to live, not die, as an example.

Long ago, Alfred Adler, the psychologist, said, "It is far easier for men to fight and die for their principles than to live up to them." The paranoid extremists profess the principles of justice and brotherhood and freedom and peace—but they suppose that committing injustice and violence against their foes is an effective way of reaching these goals.

Paranoia misjudges not only the proportion of means to ends, but also the vision of sanity. It supposes all minds to be like itself, and its crooked reasoning says, "Since I would respect a person who shows he is willing to die for what he believes, other people will respect me and pay attention to my creed if I sacrifice myself."

The true saints and heroes, however, sacrifice themselves by helping others to live better, by succoring the poor and sick and helpless, by offering their lives in a way that binds us together, not in a way that promotes hate and violence and vengeance. The mere fanatic, who is their counterfeit, always defeats his own ends.

There is an ancient Latin tag, "optima pessima corruptio," which means "the worst is a corruption of the best." Nowhere does it apply more forcefully than in the case of the paranoid terrorist, whose urge for self-destruction is a vicious parody of the loving hopefulness and faith that leads genuine martyrs to the stake.

Stuart Rosenberg

In the very nature of things, man is born into conflict. Peace does not attend his birth. His first breath is taken almost as an act of violence. His struggles to survive, from the very moment he enters the world. And from the start, he is rightfully dependent upon forces which operate outside of himself. Someone else may cut his umbilical cord; and yet, spiritually, he carries the burdens of dependence all the days of his life.

On three fronts man is unceasingly challenged.

There is, from the outset, this conflict of his with Nature. In spite of certain unique and divine endowments—his ability to think, to speak, to imagine and to create—man remains a plaything in the fingers of the forces of the universe. Nature often overwhelms him; he is, after all, but a mortal speck in an infinite, far-flung cosmos.

With this mind he tunnels mountains and bridges the waters. He spans the heights and plumbs the depths. He flies with eagles' wings and swims with the big fish of the sea. Yet, ultimately, there are tunnels and bridges he cannot build, heights and depths he cannot reach. With all of his knowledge, he discovers how short-reached human knowledge really is. He becomes wise when he stops fighting Nature, learns to live by its laws, submits when he must.

Like Nature, human nature holds man in the grip of its inexorably powerful hands. Man locks his horns, battles his neighbors, seeks vengeance and relentlessly pursues enemies who are no enemies. Man seems unable to escape conflict with his fellow men. Despite his vaunted technological skills, in dealing wih men, not things, he has hardly inched pass the station of the cavemen.

Why do men fight one another? Why do brothers kill brothers? Why have we been able to make peace with Nature by learning to submit to her laws, and are yet so primitive in the way we "live" with one another?

Some clue to an answer is found within man himself. Perhaps we fight one another because of an ongoing conflict which we have not yet learned to resolve: the battle each man has with himself! The great destructions in history may very well be the reflection of man's basic inability to get along with himself. Thus, the greatest conflict of all conflicts: Man against himself. The road to peace cuts across the highway which leads to man's soul.

We have studied the natural sciences, elaborated principles of social behavior, looked for laws in history—all, in a determined effort to come to grips with man's conflicts, to understand them and perhaps, thus, to transcend them. But we have yet to grasp fully the role of the psychic and spiritual elements in life. We may know a lot about things; we still have much more to learn about people.

Religion may not yet have all the wise and sufficient answers to the conflicts which beset us. Yet, its principal importance must be recognized. It always, has, always will, trumpeted the warning: The fault lies not in our stars, but in us. It always has been, always will remain, a necessary and urgent reminder that man must first learn to come to terms with himself, if he is to find peace in the world.

Canada's Kate wins award

LONDON (UPI) — Canadian Kate Nelligan has received the London Evening Standard Award for Best Actress of 1978.

Nelligan, 27, received the award for her performance at London's National Theatre in David Hare's Plenty, in which she played the role of an Englishwoman unable to adapt to life in post—Second World War England after a youth spent in the French Resistance.

The awards, now in their 24th year, are considered the top accolade in British theater.

Ten years ago, growing up in London, Ont., Kate Nelligan had never even been inside a theatre. Then at the age of 17, she played Gertrude in Shakespeare's Hamlet and resolved to act.

Pennies from heaven

RETFORD, England (Reuter) — Trevor Hart felt angry when he left jail for failing to pay alimony so the day after his release he attacked the prison with a shower of coins.

Hart, 36, who had spent six days in jail for failing to pay alimony to his ex-wife, was fined £30 ($72) for dangerous flying and dropping objects from an aircraft.

Amin isn't fighting

TOKYO (Reuter) — Samusoni Bigombe, Ugandan ambassador to Japan, has described as untrue a report that Ugandan President Idi Amin is to fight a Japanese wrestler.

"The story. . .that President Idi Amin of Uganda was to engage in a fighting contest with Japanese wrestler Antonio Inoki is absolutely false and a complete fabrication and tends to demean the highest office of the president of a friendly state," Bigombe said.

Japanese promoter Yoshio Ko held a news conference last week to announce that Amin had agreed to fight Inoki in a martial arts bout in Kampala, Uganda, on June 10. Heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali was to be the referee.

I tried to help Marvin—attorney

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An attorney testified Thursday that he tried to extricate Lee Marvin from his love affair with Michele Triola Marvin and convinced her to move to a new apartment just before she attempted suicide.

"The date stands out in my mind," said Louis Goldman, "because it was close to the time Michele went to the hospital for her suicide."

Miss Marvin is suing for $1 million, claiming Marvin owes her half the assets he acquired during the six years they lived together. The case has already made history on the appellate level, with the state Supreme Court ruling that unmarried cohabitating couples may sue for property rights.

Under questioning by Miss Marvin's attorney, Goldman said he had a heart-to-heart talk with her at his office in 1967 and told her the only way to save her relationship with the actor would be to move out of his house to a place of her own.

"When you told Michele the only way for her to get back with Lee for a reconciliation was to get out, you didn't believe that was true?" asked Marvin Mitchelson.

"I didn't believe it would work out," said Goldman. "I thought it was the only hope."

Mitchelson then read from Goldman's earlier deposition testimony in which he said there was no hope of saving the relationship and that he led Michele to think so only to please his client, Marvin.

"You were just trying to deceive her, were you not?" asked Mitchelson.

"No," said Goldman.

He said Miss Marvin never occcupied the apartment he eventually rented for her because she was in the hospital after having taken a drug overdose.

Cowgirls object to movie

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dallas Cowgirls are not happy about the porno film Debbie Does Dallas, now playing at a Broadway theatre, and they went into court to try to have the movie banned.

The precision group of cheerleaders, who lend a contrast to the beefy Cowboys professional football team, said the 18-year-old star of the film wears a uniform virtually identical to theirs. But, the suit says, her "explicit and lewd" sexual antics on screen are most un-Cowgirl-like.

PRESS ROW PROBE BACKED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The publishers of Vancouver's two daily newspapers, shut down by a strike-lockout for three months, said Wednesday they would be willing to take part in an independent inquiry into the dispute.

Clark Davey, publisher of Vancouver Sun, and Paddy Sherman, Province publisher, said in a joint statement that several informal discussions with representatives of the pressmen's and mailers' unions had been unsuccessful.

Union representatives refused comment, saying they had not seen the statement.

ONE OF MY FAVORITE HOMES

IS IT YOURS? Old time Victorians have loved this home since it brought genuine New England charm to its corner of Rockland in 1923. Let me take you through its inviting front door into the gracious Georgian interior with its spacious halls, reception rooms and sunporch. Let's admire the intricate mouldings and fine fireplaces — a far cry from today's colonial imitations. Then let's climb the beautiful stairway to the five bedrooms so well endowed with convenient storage and bathrooms. Down the back stairs to a kitchen remodelled to modern standards without losing colonial flavour. Oh and there are bonuses too, an attic and basement levels. SO MUCH LIVING FOR YOUR FAMILY. Come with me to see it by appointment $235,000. ML

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Public rallies to fight bill

Essential services challenged

The war against expansion of essential services legislation is gaining more public support than anticipated, union officials said Thursday.

"We had to turn people away at Kamloops Tuesday night and when the thing was over about 750 people signed our petition," said a spokesman for the B.C. Federation of Labor.

"And when you figure that the hall was hot and a lot of people had to leave early, that's some result."

The reference was to the third of a series of nine public rallies the B.C. labor movement is staging as part of its campaign against what it considers dangerously restrictive legislation.

Kelowna became the fourth target area Thursday night.

The rallies, and an accompanying advertising campaign costing up to $80,000, were initiated following the passage of Bill 46 at a special session of the Legislature in early December. The bill was used to end a strike-lockout affecting schools in the West Kootenay. And while this was bitterly opposed by labor, the strongest reaction was reserved for a single section of the bill —one that amended the previously passed Essential Services Disputes Act to cover a wide range of public employees, including those working for school boards, colleges, municipalities and regional districts.

Claiming it is part of a calculated attack by government on public sector unions, the federation and its special committee are using the campaign as a vehicle to strengthen the ties between the labor movement and the New Democratic Party.

Labor officials say the rallies are attracting a broad public audience—not just union members.

They say the first rally at Nelson 10 days ago drew 1,100 people, some of them from distant points.

Crowd estimates at Cranbrook and Kamloops were 600 and 800 respectively.

One of the remaining rallies is scheduled for Nanaimo on Tuesday. Another has been set for Victoria to coincide with the opening of the legislature. The date for that opening is still unknown.

A Vancouver rally March 8 is expected to be the largest of the nine.

Unionists say the legislation means employers can now avoid serious negotiations with the knowledge that they simply have to wait for imposition of a cooling-off period and binding arbitration.

Labor Minister Allan Williams has countered by saying the intent of the controversial section, recently proclaimed, is being widely misinterpreted. He says there is no desire for confrontation with the labor movement, and adds that job action would not be blocked unless there was a definite threat to life or health.

100 fire victims start hunt for new homes

Approximately 100 persons driven out of their dwellings in Wednesday night's apartment block fire in Esquimalt began the task of relocating Thursday.

All occupants in the 37-unit Gorge Vale Garden Apartments at 1180-1182 Colville were forced to find other accommodation after the blaze gutted the three-storey centre block, wiping out the possessions of at least 12 families.

Damage has been pegged at about $300,000 for the building, which Cedric Steele of Cedric Steele Realty Ltd. said was insured. Steele's firm bought the building in November. Loss of tenants' contents has been estimated by Steele at another $200,000.

James Eisler, Coast Claims insurance adjuster, said Thursday most of the victims did not have insurance on their possessions, which was not unusual for apartment dwellers.

Eisler said he tried to investigate the fire Thursday but could not get at the basement locker room where the fire was believed to have started at about 8:40 p.m. More than a foot of water remained in the basemant area when Eisler tried to inspect the ruins Thursday.

Both Eisler and Steele said they were mystified by the origin and rapid spread of the fire.

Eisler and an investigator from the provincial fire marshal's office in Vancouver are expected to inspect the building today to determine the cause of the blaze.

Steele said the Salvation Army jumped in to aid victims with clothing and furniture and said he would be making a financial donation to the agency today to help the fire victims.

Also contacted Thursday was Douglas Woodall, district supervisor with the provincial human resources office. Woodall said he had been in contact with about 10 families who needed varying degrees of assistance from "emotional" comfort to help in finding temporary accommodation. Most families, he said, were able to find lodgings through relatives and friends.

Steele said he had tremendous admiration for members of the Esquimalt police force, who double as firemen in the municipality. He said he saw one officer on duty at the apartment building from 6:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

The Victoria Foursquare Church at 891 Esquimalt Road has also set up a drop-off point in its basement for good used clothing, furniture, toys and other useful items for the burned-out families. Items may be left today from 1 to 4 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from 1 to 4 p.m.

Freighter abandoned

NEW YORK (UPI) — The crew of a sinking Greek freighter abandoned ship Thursday in rough seas about 850 miles west of the Azores Islands, the U.S. Coast Guard reported.

All but one of the 27 crew members of the Mitsos was accounted for. The missing man was seen jumping from the 541-foot ship without a lifejacket.

Wolfe pledges aid to fill welfare gap

The provincial government promised Thursday to pick up welfare costs which increased more than five per cent at the municipal level.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe announced the government decision, saying the move would cost the province an estimated $7.5 million but save individual municipalities hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Victoria would pay $255,208 less under the new formula, to remain in effect for one year only, Wolfe said. Other cities given as examples by the minister included Nanaimo, a saving of $164,570; Vancouver, a saving of $1.6 million; Prince George, $244,510; and Kamloops, $237,908.

A few weeks ago Wolfe announced a five-per-cent ceiling on budget increases for all municipalities. Holding the local share of welfare payments to five per cent was, he said, in keeping with that policy.

"The amount ($7.5 million) will cover the difference between the monthly $1.06 per capita which the province will collect from municipalities beginning April, and the $1.40 which most accurately reflects the projected costs in B.C. in the coming year," Wolfe said.

Social assistance cost-sharing arrangements between local and provincial governments are based on estimated costs for the next fiscal year and call for all municipalities with populations of more than 2,500 to contribute 10 per cent of the total cost.

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said he was not certain of the impact the minister's announcement would have on the municipality, "but it won't amount to anything we should be grateful for."

"It's an announcement I would have expected. There would have been hell to pay if he had not promised to pick up welfare costs which increase more than five per cent," he said.

"What the Lord giveth, the Lord taketh away."

"It just means he's not going to bill us more than a five per cent increase and as far as I'm concerned that's no saving."

Smoke price about to rise

A package of 20 cigarettes will probably cost a nickel more following announcement of a two- or three-cent raise by two tobacco companies.

Retail store prices vary from 82 to 89 cents a pack. The increase would, if passed on with an additional markup for retailers, make the new price 87 to 94 cents a package.

Cigarettes from vending machines which aren't already $1 a pack will probably go up a nickel. Companies which already charge $1 are unlikely to increase prices further because that would require replacement of the vending machine's works.

The owner of a local tobacco shop who charges 88 cents for a pack of 20 said his prices would probably go up by five cents. The extra increase would help defray higher costs.

Earl Fenwick, a partner in A & A Vending, a small local company, said prices from the company's machines varied from 85 cents to $1, depending on the commission charged by the owner of the location. "We'll probably have to add a nickel to those under $1," he said.

A serviceman at Hudson's Bay Wholesale, one of the major companies in this area, said machines charging 95 cents would go up to $1.

Pilots protest safety stance

OTTAWA (UPC) — Representatives of more than 400 Transport Canada pilots and aviation inspectors, warning another strike was imminent, criticized the government Thursday for not "taking Canada's air safety seriously."

Ed Jensen, spokesman for the Canadian Union of Professional and Technical Employees, said the group had "an employer that doesn't understand our situation" and that a strike could occur within a month.

Negotiations between the union—part of the Aircraft Operations Group—and the Treasury Board broke down Wednesday after two days of talks.

The union, which represents airport licensing inspectors and pilots of government aircraft and helicopters, staged a two-day strike in early January that ended when the Public Service Staff Relations Board ruled it illegal.

"Because we can't compete with private industry, we are losing our pilots and inspectors," Jensen told a news conference. "As a result, morale is so bad among the members that we expect to lose more very soon.

BAKER'S IN HUFF AGAIN

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — Mount Baker sneezed Wednesday, sending a spout of steam 1,500 feet into the air, says a Western Washington University geologist.

Dr. Don Easterbrook, a geology professor and close observer of the volcanic mountain, said the reason for the increased heat flow was uncertain.

He described the mountain as "doing one of its huffs."

"It's like sneezing and trying to determine whether you have the flu or just a little dust," Easterbrook said. "The mountain is sneezing."

Easterbrook said he noticed the increased heat flow at the western rim of the crater Monday, and added that the "huffs" usually occurred a couple of times a year, but had been occurring more frequently recently.

11 on panel to probe crash compensation

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the Insurance Corporation of B.C. has appointed an 11-person citizens' committee to look into methods used by the corporation for compensating victims of automobile accidents.

ICBC spokesman Bob Egby said Wednesday injury awards had been rising dramatically during the last few years and the public had expressed some dissatisfaction with certain inequities in awards.

Court awards in fatal accidents from 1974 to 1976 averaged $50,000, while in 1978, in similar cases, awards as high as $600,000 were made, Egby said.

He said this posed a critical threat to future budgeting and resulted in higher insurance premiums.

Egby said the committee was unique to ICBC because it was the first to be composed of outsiders.

Heroin centre blocked

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) - City council has acted on legal advice to halt construction of a heroin treatment centre in the downtown commercial area.

The decision was taken after city solicitor Bob Dick said the council had a legal right to stop construction. The centre is to be run by the provincial government's drug commission.

Dick said zoning regulations did not allow "institutional" use in the downtown core. Part of the centre would be a holding area to house drug users referred for treatment at night.

Council also asked the drug commission and the B.C. Building Corporation to order the owners of the private building to stop work and promised to find an alternate site for the centre.

Fat-times forest firms, sad-times shipyards to get $305 million injection

OTTAWA (UPC) — The federal government will pump $305 million into the forest and shipbuilding industries during the next five to seven years, Robert Andras, president of the cabinet's economic development board, said Thursday.

Approximately $235 million dollars in federal-provincial cost-shared incentive grants will be given to modernize pulp and paper mills in five provinces, including British Columbia.

The federal government will extend a 20 per cent subsidy to the shipping industry to the end of the year. There were plans to cut the subsidy back to a 10 percent.

● IWA eyes larger share of rosy timber profits. Page 10

Industry Trade and Commerce Minister Jack Horner told reporters the government will be injecting $70 million into the industry. The grants include already announced renovations to the expansion of drydocks in Vancouver, Saint John, N. B. and St. John's, Nfld.

Prince Edward Island will get a new ferry, seven search and rescue vessels for the Canadian Coast Guard are being tendered immediately. Plans also include an icebreaker, a fisheries patrol vessel and the refit of the supply vessel HMCS Preserv-er.

Horner said the construction will create 2,525 jobs and a greater emphasis on repairs.

In the House of Commons, New Democratic leader Ed Broadbent criticized the government for giving handouts to the pulp and paper industry which has had profit increases of 150 per cent, price increases of 40 per cent last year and an anticipated 20-percent hike this year.

"Shouldn't the companies be plowing a certain percentage of their profits back into modernization?" demanded Broadbent.

Andras said the companies will be spending "literally billions of dollars" in the next few years on modernization and matching every government dollar with three dollars.

"The pulp and paper industry has enjoyed good cash flows in the last few years, thanks to the level of the Canadian dollar but this will not last forever," Andras told reporters.

"Many mills would be pushed into bankruptcy if they were forced to modernize and install pollution controls on their own.

"This industry is too significant to lose. We have to protect jobs if we can and create new ones," he said.

Andras said the government may well be rewarding companies who have not bothered to put their profits into replacing machinery and installing pollution equipment.

Quebec will get $90 million, Ontario $46 million and B.C. will get $40 million in federal grants to update obsolete mills..

Andras said the board will be looking at other industries and making similar announcements shortly.

ALBERTA TAPPING SURPLUS TO ERASE MUNICIPAL DEBTS

EDMONTON (CP) — Years of pressure paid off for Alberta municipalities Thursday with the announcement by Premier Peter Lougheed that $1 billion in provincial surplus will be used to virtually wipe out local government debt loads.

The move could reduce property taxes by 10 to 20 per cent—as much as $100 a year for some taxpayers

While civic officials across the province welcomed the move, opposition leaders said the announcement was a pre-election bribe and had been stolen from their policy proposals.

"It's fantastic, a great move," said Edmonton Mayor Cec Purves.

The money will be distributed to all rural and urban municipalities on a $500-a-resident basis to pay off debts that cost more than eight per cent in interest—about 90 per cent of all municipal debts.

● Wolfe promises money to fill welfare increase gap. Page 47

Edmonton and Calgary each will get about $250 million. Other centres with smaller debt loads will have their debts erased entirely with money left over—in some cases millions of dollars—for other projects.

The money comes from Alberta's general revenue surplus of almost $2.5 billion, not from the $4.5-billion Heritage Savings Trust Fund, Lougheed said.

The Conservative premier added that timing of the announcement was affected by public sentiment against growing government and the sudden accumulation of unexpected oil and gas revenue.

Leftist blasts kill 20

Colonist wire services

SAN SALVADOR — Leftist guerrillas set off bombs at the central police headquarters and two police stations in El Salvador on Thursday, killing at least 20 people and injuring dozens, officials said.

They said the worst explosion occurred at the San Salvador headquarters of the national guard, this Central American country's police force.

Meanwhile, five military personnel and two civilians were killed by a third blast at the national guard headquarters in San Miguel, 120 kilometres southeast of San Salvador.

A leftist guerrilla group called the Army of the People claimed responsibility for the bombings in leaflets sent to radio and television stations. It said the bomb attacks were reprisals for the killings Jan. 20 of a priest and four other persons by soldiers.

Quebecers boo Schreyer

QUEBEC (CP) — Governor General Edward Schreyer was booed Thursday when he spoke English as well as French during the opening ceremonies of the 25th Quebec winter carnival.

When he switched to English to welcome "my fellow Canadians and Americans", the crowd reacted with boos and shouts of "go home."

Informer profited millions on drugs

● Get rid of the Mounties, says law union. Page 2

VANCOUVER (CP) — An informant paid by the RCMP to gather evidence against three suspected drug traffickers made more than $2 million dollars by selling drugs while working for the police, a Vancouver lawyer said Thursday.

Sidney Simons, whose bid to speak on police information-gathering techniques was rejected by the McDonald commission, told reporters the informant made some of that money by selling most of a pound of the restricted drug MDA bought for $8,500 with police funds and approval.

Simons said the man testified last November in Nanaimo, at the trial of Raymond Ridge, 31, of Ladysmith, who was convicted of conspiring to traffic in MDA and sentenced to three years in prison.

Simons said the case is only one of many that show the immorality and illegality of police techniques. His bid to speak to the commission, headed by Mr. Justice David McDonald, was denied because he had not submitted a brief a month before the hearing as required.

Committed 40 offences

Simons said the informant, while gathering evidence, committed "about 40 offences to which police personnel are party, directly by participating or by aiding, abetting, encouraging."

Simons said the testimony given at the trial showed that while working for the RCMP between May, 1976, and August, 1977, the informant imported two tons of marijuana and several pounds of cocaine, trafficked in speed and imported two handguns for his personal use.

His first half-pound purchase of MDA was kept by police as an exhibit, said Simons, but a later one-pound purchase, paid for by the RCMP, was given back, after samples were taken, to the informant who sold it.

Bought more with profits

Testimony at the trial, Simons said, showed that the informant then used the proceeds from the sales to buy two more pounds of MDA, both of which he sold after police had taken samples.

The informant's contact during the operation was RCMP Cpl. Chester Cary of the Victoria drug unit, who testified at the Nanaimo trial that he was aware of the the man's activity.

Staff-Sgt. Hawkes of the Victoria drug unit said the RCMP has helped relocate the man as they do all informants whose lives might be in danger after testimony. That help included a $600-a-month living allowance that was paid from September, 1977, just after the arrests were made, at least until the trial, he said.

RCMP Supt. Scotty Gardiner, in charge of criminal investigations in Victoria, refused to comment on the case, saying that it is before the courts.

Simons, however, said the case will not be heard in appeal court until this spring. The appeal will be based on the argument that the county court judge's instructions to the jury were incomplete.

Ridge was charged along with Arthur Williams of Ladysmith, who died in a plane crash before the trial. A third man wanted in connection with the case has not been found, police said.

Simons said the police seem to be going to ridiculous lengths to gain convictions, committing crimes worse than the persons they apprehended. He said it took about a year for the police informant to gather the necessary evidence against his client.

Bouey called to explain dollar dive

OTTAWA (CP) — Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, has been called to appear before a committee of MPs to help explain why the dollar continues to plummet on international markets.

In response to demands from Conservatives Thursday, the Commons finance committee took the unusual step of setting aside their ordinary business and calling a special three-hour meeting to question the central bank governor.

The meeting is tentatively scheduled for Tuesday.

The emergency meeting on the dollar goes only part way to satisfy Conservative demands that officials of the Bank of Canada, chartered banks and investment houses be called before Parliament to explain the dollar's recent troubles.

Conservative MPs greeted news of Bouey's scheduled appearance before the committee as a victory in their efforts to investigate government economic policy. The central bank governor, the chief architect of Canada's monetary policy, is a public servant who by tradition speaks through the minister of finance.

The announcement of Bouey's scheduled appearance came after a raucous debate in the Commons over the weak dollar and government economic policy.

In the course of the debate Prime Minister Trudeau stuck out his tongue at the Opposition, Conservative MP John Crosbie told Trudeau he had a forked tongue and the prime minister suggested to Joe

And down again

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar bounced up and down on New York money markets Thursday before closing at 83.35 U.S. cents, 3-100 of a cent below the 46-year low it reached Wednesday.

Early in the day, the dollar dipped to 83.21 U.S. cents. It later rallied to 83.48 before dropping again.

The federal government is due to release foreign reserve figures for the month of January today, and traders expect they will show Canada's reserves of foreign currency dropped as Ottawa bought Canadian dollars in an effort to soften the currency's fall.

If the reserves are down by an appreciable amount, the traders expect a new round of selling and renewed downward pressure on the beleagured Canadian currency.

Meeting notice too short—Fed

Premier Bennett says his cabinet has been snubbed by labor.

Labor says the premier is playing political games.

The barbs were exchanged at a distance Thursday when Bennett called a news conference to complain that the B.C. Federation of Labor had declined an invitation to appear before cabinet and present a brief.

The federation says it wasn't even supposed to be there Thursday. And it adds that a senior government official confirmed that its visit wasn't included on the cabinet's morning agenda.

Bennett made no mention of the B.C. Chamber of Commerce, which declined an invitation to present itself at the morning meeting.

The chamber apparently had the same reason as labor for not being on hand: too little time to prepare.

Bennett said at his hastily-called news conference that he thought labor would have welcomed a chance for a meeting since it seemed to have so many concerns and so much to say. He referred to the forecast of a "blood bath" that was allegedly made by federation president Jim Kinnaird at a recent rally.

He also pointed out that neither he nor Labor Minister Allan Williams had been invited to address the federation convention.

A federation spokesman said a senior official of the provincial secretary's office left a phone message Jan. 22 and called back two days later to say a meeting had been set for 11.45 a.m. Feb. 1.

"We told him we just couldn't do the necessary research, call our officers together and prepare our material in such a short time," the spokesman said. "He (the government official) said that was fine, they would schedule us for later in the year."

That, he said, was the last the federation heard of the matter until Bennett complained Thursday.

"As soon as we heard what happened we called the official and asked just what was going on. He said we weren't even scheduled on the agenda this morning."

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — I am back in this spot today with the express purpose of bringing a ray of sunshine to your drab, mid-winter lives.

Here I am in beautiful Palm Springs—winter watering hole of this great United States—and I am looking out from my motel window, across the swimming pool, to my car in the parking lot which, at this very moment, has an accumulation of at least two inches of extremely wet and ugly snow.

The temperature is 29 degrees Fahrenheit and there's a bit of a snowball fight taking place in front of my disbelieving eyes!

Ah yes, away from the cold and rain of Victoria. Aaaaagh!!!!

Club's stand: Opposition to blind progress

Re: Sierra Club defined.

I am writing to correct the misinformation contained in D.E. McMullan's letter Colonist Jan. 16.

Canada has always imported some of her needs from Europe, Asia or the U.S., whether they be people, skills, money, or knowledge. At the end of the 1960s, when it became apparent there was a need for more environmental interest voices, we imported the knowledge and experience that the Sierra Club had accumulated since its founding in 1892. We took these, modified and adapted them to Canadian needs and situations, and in the process evolved a Sierra Club of Western Canada that is independent of its American background in its policy making and actions, while at the same time retaining a link for communication and action on international issues.

Except for a small sum that goes to San Francisco for a magazine and some computer work they do for us, all club dues are retained in Canada for use in this country.

Mr. McMullan has generously left the citizens of B.C. with acres of non-forested land for their recreation—mostly glaciated, or rocky or semi-arrid, and mostly inaccessible. The Sierra Club feels that recreational lands should include the whole spectrum of land types, and be accessible to all—be they seniors, children, handicapped or 'the average Joe'.

In an unforunately arrogant assumption that the only measure of the value of a tree is in board feet, Forrester McMullan ignores the fact that more than 95 per cent of all marketable timber in B.C. is in the hands of the forest industries—hardly a position in which to call anyone else greedy.

The Sierra Club does not promote single use of any resource by anyone. Fish are for commercial and sports fishing, forests for lumbering and recreation, parks for hikers, wildlife and camper owners. Our country is in the guardianship of this generation—it is not owned by us to pollute or consume, we must leave something of merit and value and beauty for the future generations.

A motto used in the club is "Not blind opposition to progress, but opposition to blind progress"—that is the kind of 'progress' that is heedless of the long-term consequences of its actions and cares only about its own gains. We will continue to oppose this kind of action and are confident that this will stand the tests of tim

ICBC's practices of rating drivers grossly unfair

I am writing this letter to complain about ICBC's grossly unfair practices of rating drivers in age groups and by marital status.

I am a 20-year-old single male driver, ah-ha you say, you're a terrible driver, you must pay, pay, pay for your insurance.

WHY! I've been driving for years with only one minor offence, a three-point misdemeanor. Why do I have to pay such outrageous insurance premiums? My driving record is better than a lot of over 25 drivers, and definitely under 25 married drivers. (Getting married improves your driving? Interesting theory!)

Now you are saying, but you get a three-year safe driving discount, don't you? NO! Unfortunately, because I am not a true blue British Columbian and my safe driving has been done in Alberta and Manitoba it means nothing to you.

Why is that if I have a bad driving record out of province they transfer it here and I pay for it, BUT if you have a good record they don't want to hear about it.

Does this not sound unfair and prejudicial against out of province drivers?

I agree 100 per cent with Grace McCarthy, all drivers should be charged the same for car insurance unless they have a bad driving record. In other words we will quote from the law of the nation: "You are innocent until proven guilty!" not visa-versa like it is now.

I recommend the Insurance Corp. of B.C. take a trip to Manitoba where they have cheap, FAIR insurance and they still manage to break even, or close to it.

I urge all readers who agree with me to write your MLA or the minister of transportation and speak your mind. It might help clear up this mess and bring in some fair insurance policies.

Sierra Club crying wolf on Bowron harvesting

I am getting tired of hearing Mr. Nixon and the Sierra Club crying wolf. His charge that the harvesting of 1,500 acres of blowdown in the Bowron Lakes Provincial Park will mean the end of our provincial parks system is, as Mr. Chabot has said, "garbage."

Man has been given the ability to work with and change nature, an ability he often exercises. In the Bowron Lakes we are faced with the decision to let nature take its course or do something about it. The consequence of this decision must be weighed carefully before action (or inaction) is taken. That decision must be made by the professionals of the Parks Branch and the Forest Service who have the knowledge and experience to do so. If they make a poor decision they will be held accountable. However, they must first make that decision and act upon it before they can be criticized for it.

It is irresponsible of Mr. Nixon to say that these professionals, those of the Association of B.C. Professional Foresters and the logging companies are all conspiring to exploit our provincial parks based on this one isolated incident. As a citizen of this province I expect our public servants to manage our resources for the benefit of all. I hope they will continue to be allowed to do so, rationally, using the best information available, something Mr. Nixon obviously does not have or chooses to ignore.

B.C. clobbering not forgotten

Might I point out to Bill Bennett while he's talking about government takeover and government ownership, that it was Mr. Bennett Senior as head of the first Social Credit government in British Columbia that took over the B.C. Electric Company.

It was the biggest and most expensive takeover in the history of British Columbia and the people of this province have been carrying on their backs a tremendous legacy of debt and spiralling costs for energy ever since and will continue to do so for a great many years to come. And now that B.C. Hydro transit system is such a big money loser the present Social Credit government under Mr. Bennett Junior has piled this added burden on the backs of B.C. residents and taxpayers. And this is the man who talks about free enterprise and of a government that doesn't believe in governmental ownership.

The companies taken over by the NDP party were done so chiefly to prevent a loss of jobs and are now doing so well Mr. Bennett is going to give us all five free shares in said companies. We, of course, are not taken in by such grandiose gestures so close to a coming election.

We don't have such short memories that we have forgotten how hard we were clobbered by the present government when they first took office and we are intelligent enough to know that if we are foolish enough to put them back in office they will clobber us twice as hard the second time around.

If we like, we can buy more of what we already own

Mr. Trew's letter to the Colonist urges me to write a letter in reply.

I think Mr. Trew should have stated that the shares we are about to be given are part of the resource holdings acquired by the NDP and are already owned by the people of B.C. If we like we can also buy more of what we own already. Trouble is there is nothing to stop blocks of shares eventually being bought or rebought by foreigners.

If we had an honest government our BCRIC would have kept right on creating jobs and making us money as intended in the first place.

Mr. Trew's statement about the government helping protect forest management for small logging operators was wrong. The last forest management agreement gave even more to the large companies with control outside of B.C. Read about Rayonier's new holdings in the Queen Charlottes. Take note of the buy-up by the CPR of small operations right around here in the last couple of years.

Mr. Trew says Bennett claims to be keeping resources in B.C. He is the premier who would not agree to, and has not lived up to the federal government's guidelines on sellouts to foreign companies.

The Socreds in their short term have sold off more of B.C. than has happened since the early days of the W.A.C. Bennett Socreds. How about our northern coalfields? Panco Poultry to Cargill and Pacific Stagelines to the Americans? Mortgaging our ferry fleet with Eastern interests? This brings it into the multimillions sold out and makes my point so I will end here.

I'm not signing my name as I have just been taken over and still need a job.

Mandatory spraying for all dogs, cats

Regarding Child over pet letter (Jan. 18) I can only assume that the writer L.C.D. wishes to remain anonymous as he/she expects to be criticized for such an unfair attitude.

L.C.D. is quick to champion Gorde Hunter for his scathing remarks re: irresponsible pet owners who allow their dogs to mess on sidewalks, etc.

Of course I agree entirely with Gorde Hunter on this, but to use this article to suggest that pet owners "dispose" of their pets and donate to needy children is equally irresponsible on the part of L.C.D. This "either/or" attitude does nothing to further the cause of children in need, or abandoned animals.

What is needed is legislation for mandatory spaying/neutering of all cats and dogs—the only exception licensed breeders operating within a limited program. This would effectively control the pet population, government funding would assist low-income people, as it does now in the spay/neuter clinics in Vancouver and Ottawa, the roads would keep cleaner, and the needy children?

I don't know—it takes people of compassion to care for needy creatures, young or old; these people are often called "animal-lovers". I'm proud to belong.

Editorial on war 'criminal' nothing but a nice gesture

Your editorial Keep Him There (Jan. 24) is nothing but a nice gesture! For, in the next moment, you are calling Hess a war "criminal." By what standards, I may ask?

I wish to God that no man on either side in the Second World War committed any crimes worse than those of Hess. The war would have ended happily.

The Nuremberg trials acquitted Hess of all crimes, except the one of planning a war of aggression. In the meantime, all serious English and American historians have agreed, that Poland, England and the U.S.A. were just as guilty of the outbreak of the war (FDR: "Do not yield an inch!"), for they prevented a democratic solution of the problem—the "persecuted German minority in Poland."

Hitler's reaction to the flight of Hess to England was: "I guess he has to find himself another job." He did not have to. He has been 37 years in jail.

In 1953 a general amnesty for all real Italian war criminals was proclaimed! (probably without the consultation of Russia.)

Now, hear this! Listeners have club

Comment in the Jan. 26 issue of the Colonist you mention that Toastmaster clubs and debating societies and other similar organizations do not instruct in listening.

You should then be happy to know that there is a worldwide organization that does instruct in analytical listening as part of its development of the whole person.

International Toastmistress clubs list listening skills among the many areas that must be developed by any person seeking self confidence and leadership in this world. I enclose a brochure which refers to this particular point.

In the city of Victoria there are two clubs and in Sidney there is one, and of course clubs exist in several cities and communities on the Island as well as in 25 different areas of the world.

A member of Toastmistress clubs is generally, but not always a woman. We do have many male members. A member learns through participation to listen, to express thoughts coherently and without bias, and to thereby sharpen conversational skills. A member will also learn to use tact with business associates, to organize self and time and to eventually become a leader in the community.

Any person who wishes information on this inexpensive and pleasant method of educating themselves should call the undersigned for further information on meeting the challenge of today's world.

Victoria police end discrimination

Age, height clauses gone

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist reporter

Anyone wanting to join the Victoria police force will no longer be automatically rejected because of age or height requirements.

The Victoria Police Board voted in favor Wednesday of eliminating any reference to age or height from its recruiting specifications.

The policy change was triggered by complaints to the provincial Human Rights Branch from several persons whose applications to join the force weren't even considered because they didn't fall within the previous age and height requirments.

THE HUMAN RIGHTS Branch, in turn, wrote to the police board, pointing out that it was an offence under the provisions of the Human Rights Act to discriminate against job applicants on the grounds of age.

Although discrimination on the grounds of an applicant's height isn't mentioned in the act, the police board decided to eliminate that requirement as well.

The only remaining specifications for eligibility are that a candidate be a Canadian citizen in good mental and physical health and have a B.C. driver's licence.

The change didn't come without opposition a number of board members.

JANET BAIRD said it was essential that police officers in an urban core be "young, energetic and fit.

"I don't think we should be intimidated by this type of legislation," she said.

Philip Faucet said he was generally in favor of the change, but he added there had to be limitations.

It wouldn't be feasible to spend $50,000 on training a 45-year-old, considering he would stay with the force for only 15 years.

ON THE OTHER hand, he said, it didn't make sense to reject an applicant with excellent qualifications just because he was a year too old.

Chief Constable J.F. Gregory told the board removal of age and height requirements would pose no problem.

He said candidates would be judged on their over-all qualifications. It was unlikely that a 45-year-old would have the physical stamina of a 25-year-old. Alf Hood asked the chief if faced with two equally-qualified candidates, one of whom was five feet tall, the other five-foot, eight inches, which one he would hire.

"THE FIVE-foot, eight-inch one," the chief said.

That, too, was discriminatory, Hood said, but the chief replied that he had to "stand up and make a judgment at some point."

Police board chairman Mayor Micheal Young, who made the recommendation for the change, said that was the whole point. Any selection process had discriminatory elements in it, but rejecting a candidate because his or her qualifications aren't good enough was one thing; automatically barring someone from even being considered for the job because of age or height was quite another.

UNDER THE previous policy, the maximum age for joining the Victoria police force was 28 years; minimum height was five-foot, eight inches for men and five-foot, three inches for women.

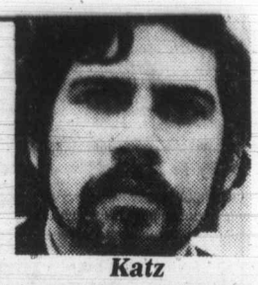
Lots to do in beating heart ills



Katz

"The big ones still have not been solved," in heart research, says a University of B.C. scientist.

Dr. Sidney Katz, an assistant professor in the pharmaceutical sciences faculty at UBC, told an audience at the kick-off luncheon for the B.C. Heart Fund drive Wednesday that heart research in the past decade has resulted in major advances in surgical and diagnostic procedures for heart and blood vessel diseases, the cause of more deaths in Canada than all other causes put together.

In the next decade, research on drugs would probably bring the biggest advances in reducing coronary artery disease, atherosclerosis, hereditary defects, and diet-related problems, Katz said.

Those major problems still require solutions, and if research funding were to be cut, they would remain unresolved, he said.

Organizations such as the Heart Foundation play a crucial role in Canadian research, said Katz, a director of Canadians for Health Research, said. The Heart Foundation, for instance, funds half of all the heart research done in Canada, a contribution as great as that made by the major federal scientific granting councils.

Comox Valley

Priorities set for hospitals

By RUTH McKELLAR
Colonist correspondent

CUMBERLAND — A joint meeting of Courtenay, Comox and Cumberland councils has set hospital priorities for the Comox Valley.

The three valley councils meet at regular intervals to discuss matters of mutual concern and take action where it is desirable to have the support of all aldermen and mayors.

Hospitals was the major thrust of the meeting this week with Mayor William Moore of Courtenay moving that priorities be set up for the establishment of the required number of extended care beds in Comox, 25 intermediate care beds at Cumberland and that the concept of replacement of facilities at Glacier View be supported.

Cumberland hospital board chairman Bryson Parnham and board member Henry Watson appeared before the combined council and explained the situation in Cumberland.

At present the two-year-old intermediate care unit has 50 beds, but can easily be added to in order to create a more economically viable 75 bed unit.

Hospital trustees feel that Cumberland should have first priority in the intermediate care field, ahead of Glacier View.

That view, however, was not shared by three aldermen and one mayor, who voted against the motion.

Mayor George Piercy of Comox, Ald. Rick Kellow of Comox and Ald. Mary Davie of Courtenay were among those who voted in the negative.

Both Davie and Piercy sat on the regional board senior citizen resource committee, which looked into replacement of the aging Glacier View facility.

In setting his priority, Piercy added: "We're not against putting intermediate care beds in Cumberland." But he said Comox requirements must come first.

Moncrief also said he was not convinced that Glacier View grounds was necessarily the best place for a new facility. He also said "they are not replacing 33 beds, they are building 75."

The Cumberland mayor also said long-term care people changed the rules and never told the ball players. He said when the unit was built in Cumberland it was to be the intermediate care unit for the valley and now that concept had been changed.

Economic development was also discussed and a resolution was passed which will see the regional board contacted in an effort to get "a move" on development.

Moncrief said there was some unhappiness because the economic development commission had not met for some time.

He also said that to secure government funding it was necessary to join with Mt. Waddington Regional District.

However, he added, "our feeling in District 71 (Comox Valley) is that basically we can look after our own house better, but we could not afford to have an economic development officer on our own."

He said he did not know if a new economic committee had been named but said he would be willing to serve on the committee, although he was no longer a regional director.

Other discussions dealt with the five-per cent ceiling imposed on municipalities, public transit and recreation.

A committee has been struck to conduct a survey to determine the needs and costs of local transportation.

All council members agreed to oppose the five-per-cent ceiling.

Another committee will be struck with representatives from each council and the school board to investigate the possibilities of applying for the winter and/or summer games.

The tentative dates which aldermen seemed to have in mind were 1981 or 1982.

At that time Mt. Waddington is expected to have Phase 1 of its operation in full swing. The valley has many other winter recreation facilities.

The only need for summer games is a track-and-field facility, which would be built if the summer games were to be held in the Comox Valley.

Space is available adjacent to the Comox Valley sports centre, which houses an ice rink and pool.

Woman thrown off bridge, hubby charged

COURTENAY, B.C. (CP) — William Victor Ritchie, 30, of Cumberland, B.C., has been charged with attempted murder after a woman was thrown off a bridge and into the Courtenay River.

Police said that the man's wife, Lena Faith Ritchie, 22, also of Cumberland, was thrown off the Fifth Street Bridge and into the river Tuesday night in this Vancouver Island community. She was pulled from the water by another Cumberland resident, Joseph O'Hara.

Mrs. Ritchie was taken to hospital, police said, and discharged herself. She then was arrested on a warrent for failure to pay a fine on an impaired driving conviction.

Police said Mrs. Ritchie was transferred to the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre in Burnaby to serve a 14-day prison term.

O'Hara also was arrested on a warrent for possession of marijuana and also was transferred to the correctional centre.

Stroyan named to harbors job

NANAIMO — Ted Stroyan has been named to fill the Nanaimo Region Board's spot on the Nanaimo Harbor Commission.

He was named to the post this week at an in-camera meeting of the regional board, in which directors interviewed 10 of the 14 applicants for the position.

Stroyan's name had first been proposed to the board as the region's harbor commission representative in December.

At that time, directors decided to advertise for candidates for the job.

Fourteen applications came in, but Tuesday night, only 10 of the 14 were on hand to be interviewed.

Two had dropped out of the competition entirely; one was unable to attend and sent a letter, and one failed to show up at the meeting.

The selection interview and selection process took the board two hours.

A regional district official said that even though the person whose name was originally proposed was the board's selection, it had been a useful exercise to hold the competition.

The board was impressed with the calibre of candidates for the job, the spokesman said.

The regional board's position on the harbor commission had been held by the late Frank Crane, who resigned the job to take one of the federal government appointments to the commission.

Crane died in early January and his federal post now also must be filled.

Stroyan, a retired MacMillan Bloedel community relations officer, has been active in civic groups.

Teacher staff requirements on rise in School District 72

CAMPBELL RIVER — School District 72 trustees have decided to up their teaching staff requirements by two per cent.

District superintendent Dave Eldred had proposed no increase in teaching staff when he announced that 1979-80 staff sizes and increases in the amount of discretionary funds allotted schools were needed to determine the operating budget for next school year. But education ministry projections indicate a two-per-cent student increase in the Campbell River district.

Trustee Peter Cagis moved that the staff be increased in order to keep up with the ministry's student increase prediction.

In initially making his recommendation of no staff increase over and above the 331.5 teachers in 1978, Eldred said the maximum number of teachers employed during the school year was 327, and that with principals and vice-principals assuming teaching duties and no student population increase foreseen, a cushion of six or seven teachers would exist to handle emergencies.

Campbell River and District Teachers Association president Maureen O'Leary pointed out that the school district had dropped from 24th position to 70th position between 1972 and 1975 in the teacher-student ratio comparison of 75 B.C. school districts.

The school district is now ranked 57th in the secondary division and 37th in the elementary pupil-teacher ratio, she said.

She voiced concern that "we are only maintaining the pupil-teacher ratio."

The school district did not receive any incentive grant from the province for reduction in per-pupil costs projected in the 1979-80 budget.

According to secretary-treasurer Phil Sampson, the district had a per-pupil cost of $80 below the provincial average last year, and for 1979 the figure is slated to be $102, not enough to merit the grant.

Another vandals victim

PARKSVILLE — Parksville has joined the Courtenay highway area in being a victim of vandals who knock down or uproot road signs.

In 1978, the Courtenay area was hard hit by vandals but RCMP were able to bring several to justice.

In Parksville, RCMP said the problem is on-going and is increasing in frequency.

Police in both areas emphasize the dangerous situation created by removal of the signs.

To drivers new to an area, stop signs at intersections are vital and could mean the difference between a safe trip and an accident.

Residents of the areas concerned have been asked to report any incidence where signs have been tampered with.

Recently the provincial highways department also indicated concern over the loss of road signs and the cost incurred in replacement.

Doll flays MLA over letter

COURTENAY — In his first public statement since being elected as Social Credit candidate in the next provincial election, Delbert Doll has lashed out at MLA Karen Sanford for a letter she sent to householders at Christmas.

Doll said the report was sent "at public expense."

Considering the record of the NDP in finance, Doll said he found it surprising that an NDP MLA would wish to raise the question.

MLA Sanford, who represents Comox riding, is a member of the New Democratic Party.

She presented certain data and then drew the wrong conclusions, according to Doll.

He took issue with her statement that "the Bill Bennett government has plunged the province deeply into debt."

Doll said her figures which she outlined, were correct but her conclusion was not.

"Sanford blames the Social Credit government for the debt, when in fact it was the NDP that left the bills," Doll said.

He then challenged her statement that "as of March 31, 1977, this debt (contingent liabilities) amounts to $5.5 billion."

He said the debt of each crown corporation is offset by its assets and most of the crown corporations are now earning enough to pay the interest on their debts and declare a profit.

"This was not the case while NDP were in power," he stated.

Doll also referred to her statements about the parity debt, which she claimed the NDP reduced from $228 million to under $70 million.

He said "this capital self sufficiency was destroyed by the NDP in three short years."

In her letter, Sanford claimed the NDP government built for the future by investing wisely in assets that appreciated in value and kept jobs in B.C.

Doll says NDP took over debt-ridden companies such as CanCel, assumed deficits such as the $310,000 debt of the Ocean Falls mill, and that Panco Poultry cost the NDP goverment $6.3 million to produce an annual revenue of $343,000, or a dividend of 5.44 per cent.

He called the dividend "rather pathetic" and said Panco had not been in danger of closing.

"These were not wise investments. The whole policy of using tax money to play the stock market and to purchase private companies is wrong. It ultimately shifts the tax burden to personal taxes, because the private business sector is destroyed," Doll said.

Beban Park arena possible memorial to Crane

NANAIMO — Plans to honor the late Frank Crane, who was active in community and sports groups, are going ahead here.

Nanaimo city council has agreed unanimously to ask the Nanaimo Regional District to name the arena at Beban Park recreation complex The Frank Crane Arena.

The proposal for the name change came from the Frank Crane Memorial Committee, which is also working to set up a scholarship fund in honor of the man who served as parks and recreation commission chairman until the end of 1978.

Crane died in early January from a heart attack, at the age of 54.

The committee told city council that there would be no Beban Park complex today if it were not for Crane's work promoting the idea.

The committee is hoping to raise at least $7,500 for the scholarship fund, so that the award would be self-perpetuating.

Donations for the fund are being taken at the main branch of the Bank of Montreal or at the Chamber of Commerce, Nanaimo News Stand or offices at Beban Park or Bowen Park.

The scholarship would be awarded on the basis of student service, especially in the field of recreation.

In other business, the city council agreed to let the development permit for the Country Club Plaza be assigned to the purchaser of the property, North American Life Assurance Company.

Vic Dixon's Country Club Mall Ltd. has sold the shopping centre site to the life insurance company.

The terms of the development permit will remain the same as those negotiated with Dixon, except for the change in the name of the developer.

Plans for the centre, which will contain a Woolco department store, food store and smaller shops, are going ahead, with expected completion in October.

Ald. Nelson Allen objected to assigning the development permit without investigating the company further, but other aldermen told him the council should not be interested in personalities and the sale of the property was a case of the marketplace in action.

The council approved the the idea of charging Protection Island residents half-rate water fees for the standpipe that has been taken to the island.

A fee of $6 per quarter will be charged for a full year for full-time residents, and for two quarters to seasonal residents.

But the aldermen agreed with a recommendation of the works and utilities committee that a flat rate not be charged in the city, with the rate instead being divided between metered and unmetered residences and metering of the entire city being speeded up.

Two applications for crown foreshore leases were handled by the council.

One, from MacMillan Bloedel, to fill 1.5 acres for the purpose of constructing a storage warehouse at Harmac, was okayed, on the recommendation of city hall staff and the parks and recreation commission.

The other, from B.C. Development Corporation, to lease about 33 hectares at Duke Point, was referred for study.

In other business, the council set the stage for a public hearing to be held Feb. 21 by approving three rezoning bylaws at third reading.

Going to public hearing are rezoning applications for Vigas, which wants to build an outlet at the Island Highway and St. George Street; Paradise Homes, for a development permit for its facility at the Island Highway and Dickinson Road, and for an apartment development on Wakesiah Avenue.

The city council is looking for anyone who is capable of, and interested in, producing a halftime show for a B.C. Lions football game.

The city has been invited to stage a halftime show during the 1979 season, and the council decided to publicize the request, to see if any local groups are interested in the offer.

Most NHL managers opposed to international games

HAMILTON (CP) — If they had their druthers, the general managers of most National Hockey League clubs would prefer to concentrate on beating each other and let the Russians skate on their own side of the pond.

But while a few owners—notably Harold Ballard of Toronto Maple Leafs—agree, NHL president John Ziegler says international hockey is here to stay.

The Hamilton Spectator polled the GMs of the 17 NHL clubs and found 14 of them opposed to exhibition games against touring European clubs. Six said they could have done without next week's Challenge Cup series in New York between the Soviet national team and the NHL All-Stars.

"We should be concentrating on our own teams and our own league and selling our own sport," said Ted Lindsay of Detroit Red Wings, the most vocal opponent of international play.

"We're closing down our league for the whole week. The players who should be practising aren't going to be practising. They'll all be in Florida. When they come back, we'll be cheating the public because they won't be in shape."

Jim Gregory of Toronto was concerned about the possibility of injuries to his key players in Challenge Cup play.

"What do I do if we lose a player in one of those games?" he asked. "If a player got hurt and missed six or seven weeks, that's the end of the year."

Fred Shero of New York Rangers said he would favor the Challenge Cup if it were held evry four years and the team had time to prepare.

"We play so many games now that nobody wants any more exhibition games," he said. "With pre-season, regular season and playoffs, we play about 120 games. They should have just one big one and only make it every four years like the World Cup of soccer and it would become a big spectacle."

Ballard, who has never permitted Toronto to play any of the Russian visitors, leads the opposition among the owners to Soviet-NHL competition.

"They come over here and get a couple of million dollars and then laugh at us," he said. "Not only that, they're going to kick our butts in this series.

"The only owners that are in favor of this are the ones who think they are going to make a buck. There are too many owners in this league who don't have any resect for the game. All they worry about is the dollars."

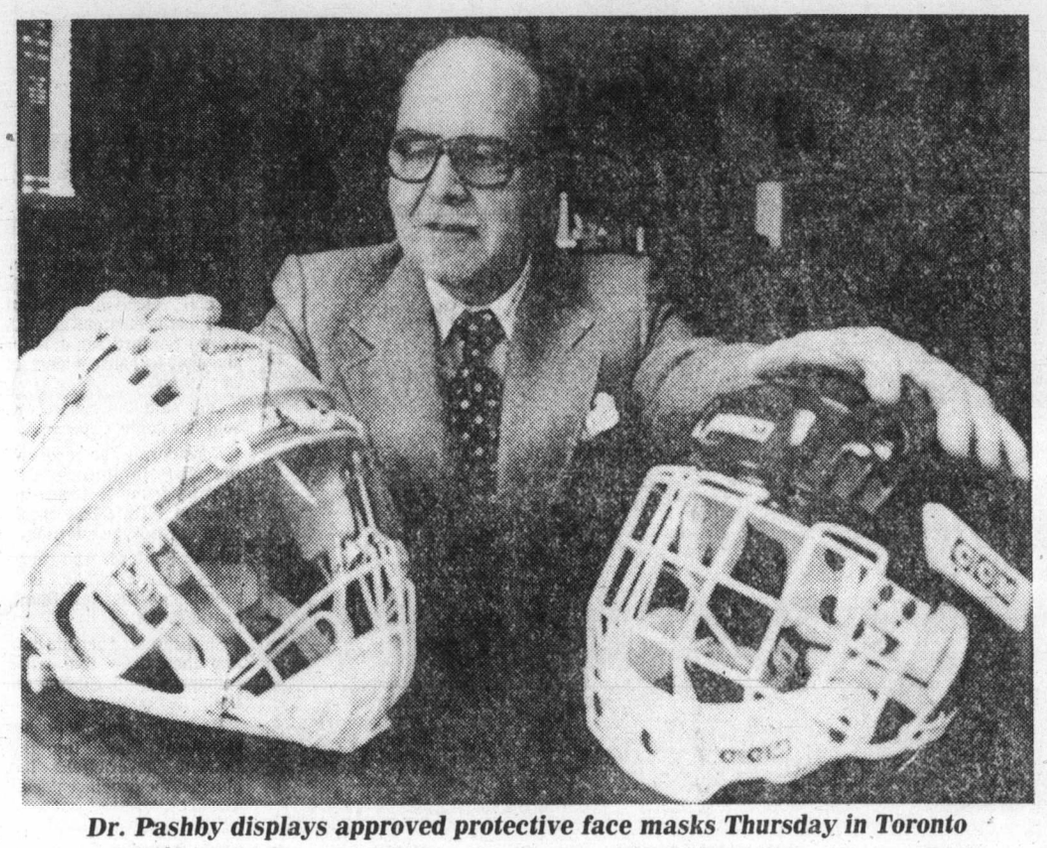
Lou Nanne of Minnesota North Stars, Cliff Fletcher of Atlanta Flames and Emile Francis of St. Louis Blues are three GMs who like the international games.

Nanne enjoys the calibre of hockey, Fletcher says the experience is valuable for his players and Francis considers the boost from Challenge Cup gate receipts to the players' pension fund a boon for the poorer NHL club which otherwise would have to foot the bill themselves.

Ziegler says NHL owners generally welcome the international competition, although the general managers' opposition is understandable.

"Their job is to put the best hockey club in that particular city," said the NHL president. "The owners, however, have a concept that goes beyond that city toward the betterment of hockey.

"A series like this is a risk but it is going to produce a good dollar and it has already created a lot of excitement. As long as the owners like it, there is going to be international hockey."



Dr. Pashby displays approved protective face masks Thursday in Toronto

Tested face masks recommended for all hockey and lacrosse players

TORONTO (CP) — A new national standard for hockey and lacrosse face masks has been approved by the Standards Council of Canada.

The Council recommends the protection be for all players, regardless of age.

"I believe this is the first time in Canada, and I'm fairly sure in the world, that there has been a national standard that covers every player in both sports," said Dr. Thomas Pashby, a Toronto ophthalmologist and chairman of the Canadian Standards Association's technical committee.

The standard is the product of more than two years of mechanical and optical examinations by experts and observations of players wearing masks in actual games. It recommends facewear that has proved to withstand a multitude of toughness tests.

While a national standard is not enforceable, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and other leagues in Canada have generally followed them.

The masks certified in the standard were tested by pucks affixed to 10-pound weights dropped from 60 feet. They have proved they do not shatter or make contact with dummy heads underneath.

In addition, masked headforms were subjected to weights of 350 pounds to ascertain that they would not shatter or make contact with the dummy heads.

The standard says that no part of the frame of the mask should be closer than half an inch to the player's face.

North Stars whip Wings to maintain hot streak

It took a while but a fusion seems to be working for the Minnesota North Stars.

Owners of the worst record in the NHL last season with only 19 victories and 45 points from their 80 games, the North Stars have suddenly taken off and are now in the thick of a scramble for one of the four wild-card Stanley Cup playoff berths.

Their fourth successive win, stretching their unbeaten streak to nine, came Thursday night when they handed a 6-1 walloping to the out-of-it Detroit Red Wings, last season's most-improved team.

Victory gave the North Stars 47 points from their first 50 games, and moved them, with a game in hand, within five points of the second-place Toronto Maple Leafs.

In other Thursday games, Boston Bruins snapped out of a slump by knocking off Chicago Black Hawks 6-1, and 4-1 victories were registered by New York Islanders over Philadelphia Flyers and Atlanta Flames over Vancouver Canucks.

Newcomers who have been a big help all season, again played key roles Thursday. Rookie Bobby Smith, improving steadily and a prime candidate for the Calder Trophy, shot his 19th and 20th goals and had an assist; goalkeeper Gilles Meloche, who came from Cleveland Barons when the clubs were amalgamated, continued his fine play, and defenceman Gary Sargent, who came from Los Angeles Kings in a trade and is a big reason for a significant reduction in the goals-against average, had a goal and an assist.

Meloche, who was at his best in a 13-for-13 first period which enabled his club to get off to a 1-0 start, had to leave the game for the stitching of a forehead cut but returned.

North Stars stretched out to 4-0 in the second period and completed their scoring before the Wings prevented a shutout.

THings didn't go at all well for ex-Canuck Pat Quinn in his NHL coaching debut. He was at home, but the Islanders came to town motivated by two successive home-ice defeats, and they checked well and made the most of their 18 shots.

It was a 1-1 affair starting the third period, and Clarke Gillies, Mike Bossy and Lorne Henning put it away for the Patrick Division leaders. It extended the Flyers' winless streak to nine games, their longest since the 1970/71 season.

The in-and-out Flames moved seven points ahead of the Flyers and to within a point of third place with their easy win over the injury-decimated Canucks.

Victory was the fourth in a row, and the fifth straight on home ice, for the club which started the season 10-0-2 and has since surged and skidded in alternate shorter streaks.

Jere Gillis got the Canucks away on top with his 10th goal of the season, but the Flames, led by Jean Pronovost, weren't particularly pressed. Pronovost, who got away to a slow start this season but is now going in top form, made it 1-1 with his 20th goal, set up rookie Red Laurence for the winning goal and drew an assist on Ken Houston's clincher.

Goalkeeper Gerry Cheevers was a key player for the Bruins although they allowed the Hawks only 17 shots. Most of them were dangerous, and Cheevers was brilliant in the second period as the Bruins killed off three successive penalties. Peter McNab had a goal and two assists.

Smith tries with Jets

WINNIPEG (CP) — Goaltender Gary Smith, who played for 13 years in the National Hockey League, is on a tryout with Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association.

Smith, who played 11 games this season with the now-disbanded Indianapolis Racers of the WHA, joined the Jets Thursday on a three or four-day tryout.

Cougars trying new winger

Like most of the rest of the Western Hockey League, Victoria Cougars had the night off Thursday.

Only Saskatoon Blades and Medicine Hat Tigers took the ice in anger, skating to a 3-3 tie in the Alberta city.

Cougars, who play host to Billings Bighorns at Memorial Arena Saturday night, practised as usual Thursday—minus wingers Greg Adams and Bob Jansch.

Adams and Jansch sat out with mild cases of strep throat but should be dressed Saturday.

So will Brad Yachimec, a right winger from Sherwood Park Crusaders of the Alberta Junior Hockey League up for a brief tryout.

Yachimec, brother of Bart Yachimec of Portland Winter Hawks, saw limited action for the injury-torn Cougars in their 3-2 loss to the Bruins in New Westminster on Wednesday.

Four Cougars are currently on the injury list.

Victoria is in third place in the Western Division, three points back of New Westminster and 23 behind first-place Portland.

In Medicine Hat, Rod Van Slyke scored at 5:44 of the third period to lift the Tigers into the tie.

The Blades, who outshot Medicine Hat 37-34, led 3-2 after the second period. The first period ended in a 1-1 tie.

There were 12 minor penalties, seven to Saskatoon.

Cocaine confirmed in Stabler issue

GULF SHORES, Ala. (AP) — Police chief James Maples said Thursday lab tests have confirmed that cocaine was the susbstance planted on the car of a California sports writer who came here to interview National Football League star Ken Stabler.

Maples said a report from state toxicologist Jim Small of Mobile says an analysis "reveals the presence of cocaine" in the powdery substance found Jan. 22.

He said an investigation is continuing and there have been no arrests.

Maples said the toxicologist's report did include the amount of cocaine found in the substance. But the police chief declined to disclose what the amount was. Earlier police reports said there was "about an ounce" of a powdery substance in the packet found on the car of Sacramento Bee sports writer Bob Padecky.

Police arrested Padecky after finding the substance but a short time later dropped any charges. Maples said it was determined that the cocaine apparently had been planted on Padecky's car in an attempted frame-up.

Stabler, the quarterback for Oakland Raiders, said he knew nothing about the apparent frame-up and that the episode was embarrassing to him. Padecky's arrest occurred as the sports writer left one Gulf Shores lounge to resume the interview with Stabler at another location.

Police said the sports writer's car was stopped and the arrest was made because the police department had received two anonymous telephone tips saying cocaine was on the car.

Riddell leads charge

Chris Riddell scored four goals Thursday night and Ron Poole added three more as Esquimalt Maple Leafs thumped Victoria Athletics 12-6 in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game at Pearkes Arena.

Gerry Blanchette and Bayden Robinson scored twice each for Esquimalt, which led 6-5 after two periods. The teams were tied at four after one.

Steve Kishkan kicked out 26 shots for Esquimalt and Rich Bains made 28 saves for Athletics.

Fat-times forest firms, sad-times shipyards to get $305 million injection

OTTAWA (UPC) — The federal government will pump $305 million into the forest and shipbuilding industries during the next five to seven years, Robert Andras, president of the cabinet's economic development board, said Thursday.

Approximately $235 million in federal-provincial cost-shared incentive grants will be given to modernize pulp and paper mills in five provinces, including British Columbia.

The federal government will extend a 20 per cent subsidy to the shipping industry to the end of the year. There were plans to cut the subsidy back to 10 per cent.

● IWA eyes larger share of rosy timber profits. Page 10

Industry Trade and Commerce Minister Jack Horner told reporters the government will be injecting $70 million into the industry. The grants include already announced renovations to the expansion of drydocks in Vancouver, Saint John, N. B. and St. John's, Nfld.

Prince Edward Island will get a new ferry, seven search and rescue vessels for the Canadian Coast Guard are being tendered immediately. Plans also include an icebreaker, a fisheries patrol vessel and the refit of the supply vessel HMCS Preserver.

Horner said the construction will create 2,525 jobs and a greater emphasis on repairs.

In the House of Commons, New Democratic leader Ed Broadbent criticized the government for giving handouts to the pulp and paper industry which has had profit increases of 150 per cent, price increases of 40 per cent last year and an anticipated 20-per cent hike this year.

"Shouldn't the companies be plowing a certain percentage of their profits back into modernization?" demanded Broadbent.

Andras said the companies will be spending "literally billions of dollars" in the next few years on modernization and matching every government dollar with three dollars.

"The pulp and paper industry has enjoyed good cash flows in the last few years, thanks to the level of the Canadian dollar but this will not last forever," Andras told reporters.

"Many mills would be pushed into bankruptcy if they were forced to modernize and install pollution controls on their own.

"This industry is too significant to lose. We have to protect jobs if we can and create new ones," he said.

Andras said the government may well be rewarding companies who have not bothered to put their profits into replacing machinery and installing pollution equipment.

Quebec will get $90 million, Ontario $46 million and B.C. will get $40 million in federal grants to update obsolete mills.

Andras said the board will be looking at other industries and making similar announcements shortly.

ALBERTA TAPS SURPLUS TO ERASE CIVIC DEBTS

EDMONTON (CP) — Years of pressure paid off for Alberta municipalities Thursday with the announcement by Premier Peter Lougheed that $1 billion in provincial surplus will be used to virtually wipe out local government debt loads.

The move could reduce property taxes by 10 to 20 per cent—as much as $100 a year for some taxpayers

While civic officials across the province welcomed the move, opposition leaders said the announcement was a pre-election bribe and had been stolen from their policy proposals.

"It's fantastic, a great move," said Edmonton Mayor Cec Purves.

The money will be distributed to all rural and urban municipalities on a $500-a-resident basis to pay off debts that cost more than eight per cent in interest—about 90 per cent of all municipal debts.

● Wolfe promises money to fill welfare increase gap. Page 47

Edmonton and Calgary each will get about $250 million. Other centres with smaller debt loads will have their debts erased entirely with money left over—in some cases millions of dollars—for other projects.

The money comes from Alberta's general revenue surplus of almost $2.5 billion, not from the $4.5-billion Heritage Savings Trust Fund, Lougheed said.

The Conservative premier added that timing of the announcement was affected by public sentiment against growing government and the sudden accumulation of unexpected oil and gas revenue.

Police provided cash for purchases, hideaway fund, and lawyer charges:

Informer profited millions on drugs

● Get rid of the Mounties, says law union. Page 2

VANCOUVER (CP) — An informant paid by the RCMP to gather evidence against three suspected drug traffickers made more than $2 million dollars by selling drugs while working for the police, a Vancouver lawyer said Thursday.

Sidney Simons, whose bid to speak on police information-gathering techniques was rejected by the McDonald commission, told reporters the informant made some of that money by selling most of a pound of the restricted drug MDA bought for $8,500 with police funds and approval.

Simons said the man testified last November in Nanaimo, at the trial of Raymond Ridge, 31, of Ladysmith, who was convicted of conspiring to traffic in MDA and sentenced to three years in prison.

Simons said the case is only one of many that show the immorality and illegality of police techniques. His bid to speak to the commission, headed by Mr. Justice David McDonald, was denied because he had not submitted a brief a month before the hearing as required.

Committed 40 offences

Simons said the informant, while gathering evidence, committed "about 40 offences to which police personnel are party, directly by participating or by aiding, abetting, encouraging."

Simons said the testimony given at the trial showed that while working for the RCMP between May, 1976, and August, 1977, the informant imported two tons of marijuana and several pounds of cocaine, trafficked in speed and imported two handguns for his personal use.

His first half-pound purchase of MDA was kept by police as an exhibit, said Simons, but a later one-pound purchase, paid for by the RCMP, was given back, after samples were taken, to the informant who sold it.

Bought more with profits

Testimony at the trial, Simons said, showed that the informant then used the proceeds from the sales to buy two more pounds of MDA, both of which he sold after police had taken samples.

The informant's contact during the operation was RCMP Cpl. Chester Cary of the Victoria drug unit, who testified at the Nanaimo trial that he was aware of the the man's activity.

Staff-Sgt. Hawkes of the Victoria drug unit said the RCMP has helped relocate the man as they do all informants whose lives might be in danger after testimony. That help included a $600-a-month living allowance that was paid from September, 1977, just after the arrests were made, at least until the trial, he said.

RCMP Supt. Scotty Gardiner, in charge of criminal investigations in Victoria, refused to comment on the case, saying that it is before the courts.

Simons, however, said the case will not be heard in appeal court until this spring. The appeal will be based on the argument that the county court judge's instructions to the jury were incomplete.

Ridge was charged along with Arthur Williams of Ladysmith, who died in a plane crash before the trial. A third man wanted in connection with the case has not been found, police said.

Simons said the police seem to be going to ridiculous lengths to gain convictions, committing crimes worse than the persons they apprehended. He said it took about a year for the police informant to gather the necessary evidence against his client.

Bouey called to explain dollar dive

OTTAWA (CP) — Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, has been called to appear before a committee of MPs to help explain why the dollar continues to plummet on international markets.

In response to demands from Conservatives Thursday, the Commons finance committee took the unusual step of setting aside their ordinary business and calling a special three-hour meeting to question the central bank governor.

The meeting is tentatively scheduled for Tuesday.

The emergency meeting on the dollar goes only part way to satisfy Conservative demands that officials of the Bank of Canada, chartered banks and investment houses be called before Parliament to explain the dollar's recent troubles.

Conservative MPs greeted news of Bouey's scheduled appearance before the committee as a victory in their efforts to investigate government economic policy. The central bank governor, the chief architect of Canada's monetary policy, is a public servant who by tradition speaks through the minister of finance.

The announcement of Bouey's scheduled appearance came after a raucous debate in the Commons over the weak dollar and government economic policy.

In the course of the debate Prime Minister Trudeau stuck out his tongue at the Opposition. Conservative MP John Crosbie told Trudeau he had a forked tongue and the prime minister suggested to Joe

And down again

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar bounced up and down on New York money markets Thursday before closing at 83.35 U.S. cents, 3-100 of a cent below the 46-year low it reached Wednesday.

Early in the day, the dollar dipped to 83.21 U.S. cents. It later rallied to 83.48 before dropping again.

The federal government is due to release foreign reserve figures for the month of January today, and traders expect they will show Canada's reserves of foreign currency dropped as Ottawa bought Canadian dollars in an effort to soften the currency's fall.

If the reserves are down by an appreciable amount, the traders expect a new round of selling and renewed downward pressure on the beleaguered Canadian currency.

Leftist blasts kill 20

Colonist wire services

SAN SALVADOR — Leftist guerrillas set off bombs at the central police headquarters and two police stations in El Salvador on Thursday, killing at least 20 people and injuring dozens, officials said.

They said the worst explosion occurred at the San Salvador headquarters of the national guard, this Central American country's police force.

Meanwhile, five military personnel and two civilians were killed by a third blast at the national guard headquarters in San Miguel, 120 kilometres southeast of San Salvador.

A leftist guerrilla group called the Army of the People claimed responsibility for the bombings in leaflets sent to radio and television stations. It said the bomb attacks were reprisals for the killings Jan. 20 of a priest and four other persons by soldiers.

Markers spell relief for searching pooches

As any four-legged creature knows, winter spells dog days for the family pet. But municipal officials in Ancaster, Ont., have come to the rescue. Tall markers painted flourescent orange have been attached to all fire hydrants so that they can be located in deep-snow emergencies — fire and canine.

Quebecers boo Schreyer

QUEBEC (CP) — Governor General Edward Schreyer was booed Thursday when he spoke English as well as French during the opening ceremonies of the 25th Quebec winter carnival.

When he switched to English to welcome "my fellow Canadians and Americans," the crowd reacted with boos and shouts of "go home."

Premier Bennett says his cabinet has been snubbed by labor.

Labor says the premier is playing political games.

The barbs were exchanged at a distance Thursday when Bennett called a news conference to complain that the B.C. Federation of Labor had declined an invitation to appear before cabinet and present a brief.

The federation says it wasn't even supposed to be there Thursday. And it adds that a senior government official confirmed that its visit wasn't included on the cabinet's morning agenda.

Bennett made no mention of the B.C. Chamber of Commerce, which declined an invitation to present itself at the morning meeting.

The chamber apparently had the same reason as labor for not being on hand: too little time to prepare.

Bennett said at his hastily-called news conference that he thought labor would have welcomed a chance for a meeting since it seemed to have so many concerns and so much to say. He referred to the forecast of a "blood bath" that was allegedly made by federation president Jim Kinnaird at a recent rally.

He also pointed out that neither he nor Labor Minister Allan Williams had been invited to address the federation convention.

A federation spokesman said a senior official of the provincial secretary's office left a phone message Jan. 22 and called back two days later to say a meeting had been set for 11.45 a.m. Feb. 1.

"We told him we just couldn't do the necessary research, call our officers together and prepare our material in such a short time," the spokesman said. "He (the government official) said that was fine, they would schedule us for later in the year."

That, he said, was the last the federation heard of the matter until Bennett complained Thursday.

"As soon as we heard what happened we called the official and asked just what was going on. He said we weren't even scheduled on the agenda this morning."

Philp loses a legacy

A North Saanich alderman was deprived in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday of the major share of a 1971 will said to be worth about $138,000 net.

Mr. Justice J.G. Gould made his ruling following an eight-day hearing into the will of Irene Frances McRae, who died Nov. 10, 1977.

In her last will, she left $10,000 legacies to each of her daughters, Doreen Beverley Williamson of West Vancouver and Sally Laidlaw of Vancouver.

The residue of the estate went to North Saanich Ald. Owen Bartley Philp, 48, subject to a life interest to his 82-year-old father Bartley Somerville Philp, with whom McRae lived between 1970 and 1973 after they had first met at a party in 1967.

But in prior wills, the two daughters were to be the beneficiaries of the entire McRae estate.

Two actions were filed in supreme court. Gould ruled that the last will had been proved and granted probate. But then he redivided the will under an action brought by the daughters under the Testators Family Maintenance Act.

Gould increased the legacies to the daughters to $35,000 each plus interest from Nov. 10, 1977 to the present time. The interest is the average the estate has been earning, about eight to 8½ per cent.

The income on the net amount of the estate that remains after the legacies are paid goes to the elder Philp. The residue on his death will then be divided equally among the daughters instead of the alderman, who was sustained in his capacity as executor.

Gould indicated that his written reasons will be handed down later.

The daughters were represented in court by Hugh Henderson of Victoria and Brian McLoughlin of Vancouver. George Macintosh of Vancouver represented Philp.

LEGISLATION SLAMMED

'Never again' says stymied hospitals union

By DON COLLINS
Colonist reporter

The first union to voluntarily use the binding arbitration machinery of the Essential Services Disputes Act says the experience has been so bitter that it will never make the same mistake again.

"Even though employers are failing to abide by terms of such awards, the main criticism must be reserved for the Social Credit government for inflicting on public sector workers legislation designed to benefit public sector employers—namely the government. It is leading us to a state of industrial relations dictatorship," Jack Gerow, secretary-business manager of the 22,000-member Hospital Employees' Union said Thursday night.

Gerow is before the B.C. Labor Relations Board trying to prove that operators of seven Vancouver area private hospitals are refusing to implement terms of a binding arbitration award brought down Jan. 18 by Victoria lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood. He says he expects the union may soon have to take the same course of action concerning a master agreement with more than 100 major B.C. hospitals.

An independent union, the HEU applied first for an arbitrated settlement with the private hospitals, then with the major hospitals. The major agreement came through first, but only after a long battle that saw both the union and government opposing the industry's efforts to upset the award in court.

Gerow claims the machinery of the legislation is such that employers seem free to take their time abiding by awards. The result is a painfully slow procedure, he says.

The government has taken advantage of this, says Gerow, by setting five per cent increase guidelines on public sector spending. He says it means employers are now able to use this ceiling as an excuse for trying to get around contract obligations.

In the case of the private hospitals, some 500 employees earning what Gerow calls "poverty level" wages —(the basic wage was $4.66 an hour)—were without a contract since July, 1977. Gerow says the employers have refused to implement some of the terms of the award and that this has created bad feelings and a threat of job action.

He says the union has served seven days' notice on the major hospitals' bargaining agent, the Health Labor Relations Association, that it will seek action before the LRB if meetings aren't held to discuss a contract "opener" for 1979. The settlement reached through arbitration provided for a seven per cent hike this year, another one per cent in benefits, and an automatic opener if the rise in the cost of living exceeded seven per cent.

While the HEU is not affiliated with the B.C. Federation of Labor, it is so incensed with the essential services legislation and what it considers unfair treatment of public sector employees, it has decided to support the federation's current protest rallies, Gerow says.

"We've got to change the policies. And if we can't change the policies, we've got to change the politicians."

He accuses Premier Bennett of voicing "political pap" through statements that he wants consultation with the labor movement.

"Last summer when we were having difficulties concerning implementation of an award, I sent a telegram to the premier asking for such consultation. And to this day he hasn't replied."

Pioneer home restoration cost runs up

It may not have been such a good idea after all to "save" Saanich's oldest home.

It was almost a year ago that the Heritage Advisory Committee first embarked on its program to save the residence built in 1859 by mariner Captain Charles Dodds and spend $21,000 on having it restored to its former grandeur, but the committee is still haggling over a future use for the old structure.

The committee was told Thursday that restoration would cost an additional $8,000 and no definite decision had yet been taken on future use of the former stately home.

Some members suggested the original part of the building should serve as an historic artifact and newer portions like the kitchen be used for storage of sports equipment.

However, before any decision is made, it was agreed that municipal staff and a heritage building architect would tour the building and determine the amount of restoration work to be done.

The house was moved from Kenmore to nearby Lambrick Park last April because it stood on the site of a planned six-lot subdivision, and municipal crews have been working on the restoration as a "fill-in" between various construction jobs.

Neil Findlow of the municipal planning department told the committee that 20 of the 27 restoration items had been completed at a cost of $13,500, but additional money would be required if the remaining major items were to be completed.

They include electrical heating, upgrading plumbing, providing water and sewer hookup and drainage facilities.

Committee chairman Douglas Franklin said he was opposed to spending money on water and sewer as he envisaged the house only being open at certain times for tours by groups. The old building, he suggested, could be included in educational field trips arranged by local schools.

Architect Peter Orme suggested the house be rented to a commercial enterprise as a means of recovering some of the tax dollars spent on restoration.

Heritage 'pocket' in sight

The Saanich Heritage Advisory Committee has narrowed to 70 from 150 the number of residential and agricultural buildings proposed for heritage designation.

The list will be presented to the committee next month and later to council, chairman Douglas Franklin said at a meeting Thursday.

The list was pared after "windshield inspections" and more detailed examinations and contact with owners. The committee embarked on its task last April.

Franklin said the single-family houses being considered for designation are scattered throughout the municipality while the farm buildings are concentrated in two or three areas.

In addition to identifying heritage buildings, the committee is also considering designating a series of houses—a pocket neighborhood—on Kisber Avenue, Franklin said.

There is also a possibility the committee will make recommendations about establishing a Saanich museum.

All archival material is now stored in a municipal hall vault.

The committee has already presented council with a recommended list of 16 institutional buildings it believes should be designated by bylaw.

Still critical

Three teenagers injured in a Jan. 13 car crash on Claremont Avenue in Saanich were still in critical condition Thursday at Victoria General Hospital. Jack Schwartzenberger and Leith Hulbert were in the hospital's burns unit, and Lawrence Husiman was in intensive care.

Salvation Army opens fund drive for centre

The Salvation Army Thursday kicked off its $500,000 fund-raising campaign for the construction of a new $3 million building at Johnson and Wharf.

The complex will accommodate the Harbor Light Centre for the rehabilitation and treatment of alcoholics, the Men's Social Services centre for transients, as well as the Salvation Army's Thrift Store.

At present, the programs are operated out of two separate buildings, both of them old and cramped.

The new complex will have 53,000 square-feet, 450 of which will be used for storage.

The new facilities will have 121 beds, 61 for the Harbor Light Centre and 60 for the Social Services Centre. A chapel will accommodate 150 people.

The sleeping accommodation will consist of 52 single rooms, four four-bed dormitories, three dormitories with eight beds and one with three beds.

There will also be staff and counselling rooms in the new complex.

Salvation Army officials said Thursday that the new building will enable them to expand their programs, paricularly the alcoholic treatment centre.

There was a great need for the treatment of alcoholics, but the present quarters simply didn't permit expansion.

Last year, the Harbor Light Centre admitted 118 alcoholics for treatment and counselling. The new quarters will double that capacity.

The new building will be financed from a number of sources. The provincial government is contributing $1 million, the Salvation Army $1.5 million and the special building fund drive will raise the remaining $500,000.

Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier, chairman of the fund-raising committee, said he was confident that the target would be met.

The committee will approach businesses as well as individuals but won't conduct a door-to-door campaign which because it would interfere with the Salvation Army's regular campaign for operating funds.

Cartoon on you-know-who withheld by newspaper

A spokesman for Victoria Times, which recently lost a libel suit to Municipal Affairs Minister William Vander Zalm, said Thursday the newspaper decided not to publish another cartoon dealing with the controversial minister.

The new effort by cartoonist Bob Bierman, who was named in the libel suit, was drawn after the minister sang a comic song that used "frog" for French-Canadian at a regional convention of the Social Credit party last weekend.

Vander Zalm said the song was all in fun.

He won a libel suit against a Bierman cartoon which showed a gleeful Vander Zalm pulling the wings off a fly. There was no caption.

The newspaper is appealing the decision.

The Times spokesman said the newspaper decided not to run the frog cartoon after its lawyer said it might be considered contempt of court since the appeal is pending.

Water line unplugged

Approval for the Saanich Peninsula water line to cross the federal agricultural research station property, west of the Pat Bay Highway, has been received.

Rerouting the line around the federal property would have cost B.C. taxpayers an additional $70,000.

Transport Minister Otto Lang sent a telex to Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis on Thursday which said:

"I am informed approval was given by department of agriculture officials on Jan. 25 to the Capital Region District for the water main to be constructed across the research station property.

"I will communicate to your colleague Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm my hope that the respective officials will quickly resolve the issues in a matter satisfactory to both users of the system and the capital region district."

Curtis sent Lang a telex last week, outlining the difficulties he has had during the last few weeks in getting cooperation from Lang on the water issue.

Curtis said Lang's staff in Ottawa and Vancouver had been "arrogant and indifferent."

On Thursday Curtis said he was pleased the project could start rolling again, "after a great many weeks of delay."

'Get-rich' ad jangles BBB phones

A full-page "get rich" advertisement in Thursday's Colonist and Times is not all it is cracked up to be, says the Victoria Better Business Bureau.

The ad, entitled "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches," offers information on how to become rich without working hard.

The ad suggests that those answering the ad may become millionaires. It says the information one needs is contained in a book which costs $10.

It will be "the biggest bargain of your life," the ad says.

Better Business Bureau manager Bill Tindall said Thursday in an interview that one can get the same information from "numerous books in the public library."

All you'll get for your $10 is a book on self-improvement, Tindall said.

He said that Joe Karbo, the man who signed the ad, has been in the business since about 1951.

Karbo "operates a variety of mail order companies offering a wide range of goods," Tindall said. "The claims he makes are ambiguous."

Tindall said Karbo has run ads for about 20 years which promise to "let a few friends in" on his secret.

The same type of ad that has run in the two Victoria dailies has also run in magazines like "National Enquirer and Midnight Expose," said Tindall.

Tindall said he did not believe the ad was the same type that offered a get-rich scheme only to send readers a booklet that advised running another ad.

"That routine is usually the 'homework scheme' where you ask for a booklet and it says to boil a bar of soap and make liquid soap," he said.

Tindall said his office has received "lots of inquiries" concerning the ad, as well as a similar ad that ran in both Victoria papers on Jan. 10 and 11.

Industrial site on comeback trail

Saanich is about to enter another round in the saga over industrial development at Royal Oak.

Ald. Sandy Noel said in an interview Thursday that he would revive the controverial issue at Monday night's council meeting.

"I feel it's time council took its head out of the sand and settled this matter," he said.

He made the comments following the release of a report on the recent Saanich industrial referendum by University of Victoria political scientist Dr. Daniel Koenig.

The analysis by Koenig shed no new light on the referendum, according to Noel, "and it's for this reason that I'm going to raise the issue at council."

To the general question whether residents favored establishment of an industrial zone, the vote in November showed 5,792 in favor and 3,221 opposed.

The vote rejecting the Interurban area as a site for industrial development showed 2,988 voting yes and 4,071 opposed. The third question on the ballot showed 4,347 residents supporting the Royal Oak site with 3,496 opposed.

The referendum came after council had narrowly rejected a plan for industrial development on 128 acres at Glanford-Vanalman and had overwhelmingly rejected Mayor Mel Couvelier's plan for a municipal land-banking scheme on 141 acres at Interurban.

Results of the referendum questions indicated that development of an industrial zone was supported in principle, Koenig says.

It also showed Royal Oak was an acceptable site and that Interurban was not acceptable to residents.

The analysis showed 68 per cent of those favoring creation of an industrial zone wanted it at Royal Oak compared with 47 per cent who felt Interurban was the logical site.

The Royal Oak and Interurban sites received more negative than positive votes in both the advance poll and the Glanford poll, Koenig notes in his report.

Noel said he believed it was for the good of the municipality that the controversy over industrial development be settled.

"Some members of council were afraid of the vocal Royal Oak Community Association last time around," he said. "They were outspoken all right, but they only represented about 40 per cent of the area residents."

Noel said he was confident council would vote 5-4 in favor of the Royal Oak site if the question was placed before aldermen in the near future.

"Council has to have enough guts to stand up and be counted; we've been dilly-dallying too long."

Noel said that because of council's inaction the Capital Region Board had been "sitting" on a Saanich request to have the property at Royal Oak rezoned residential.

One member of council not in Noel's corner is Mayor Mel Couvelier.

He intends resurrecting the Interurban scheme and says he will not accept the Royal Oak site without a fight.

He favors the Interurban site because it could be offered for between $2 and $2.25 a square foot compared with $6 a square foot for land at Royal Oak.
